BODIES OF BALL CHILDREN FOUND

Missing Since Last December When Insane Mother Took Them Away From School—Long Winter Hunt Unsuccessful.

BROCKTON, May 29.—The bodies of Tommy and Grace Ball, the two children who disappeared last December when their mother took them from the school, were found in a swamp off Oak street to-day. Discovery of the remains identified by John Ball, the father, by the clothing, was made by a Polish farm hand who happened to be passing through the swamp.

The bodies of the children were in such a state of decomposition that the manner of their death could not be told. Dr. Paine, the medical examiner, ordered the remains taken to Vinal's undertaking rooms, where further examination will be made.

Ever since the disappearance of the children, efforts have been made to get Mrs. Ball, who is confined in the Taunton Insane Asylum, to tell what had become of the little ones. The woman was, however, never able to give the slightest clue as to what she had done with them.

Four days after they went away Mrs. Hall appeared at her home, her hands and feet frozen and her mind wandering. For a time her life was despaired of. Her wanderings with the children appeared to be a blank space in her mind. She could not tell where she had been.

BODIES FOUND IN SWAMP.

Immediately after the word was received that the body of the boy had been found, officers under the direction of City Marshal Ira Kingman went at once to the swamp and started search for the little girl's remains. Inside of two hours they uncovered the body.

The spot where the bodies were found is known locally as Hewett's Woods. Three or four times police and volunteer searchers went over the territory, but owing to the snow and the frozen ground they failed to discover them where the mother had concealed them.

Mrs. Ball was seen entering the woods with the two children by Misses Alice and Ellen Brown on the afternoon that they left home. Mrs. Ball seemed to be dragging the children along. She went with them a short distance along a wood road, came out again and evidently took another path on account of running into men who were engaged in wood chopping.

NEW CLEW IN STAULA CHILD MURDER CASE

At the beginning at Dedham to-day of the inquest on the death of Louise Staula, the seven-year-old girl who was murdered three weeks ago, the officers at work on the case discovered a new witness whom they believe will establish a motive for the crime.

"Sensational developments are likely to take place in this case before the day is over," declared State Officer Fred Flynn.

The new witness is Augusta Webberson, twenty-two years of age, who lives on Washington street, a short distance from the home of the Staula family. Miss Webberson has been employed at Hyde Park and returned to her home yesterday. Her family told her of the suspicions of the people in the neighborhood and what the police were doing.

Immediately Miss Webberson sought the officers and told them her story. It was in substance that some time in April she went to the knoll where the child was slain to gather pussy willows.

Strangely Confronted.

While she was engaged in the work she was suddenly confronted by a person who has been questioned by the police. He picked up two or three stones and said to Miss Webberson:

"You get off this island or I'll throw these stones at you."

"Why?" asked the young woman.

"Because I own this island, and I don't allow anyone on it, or all."

Miss Webberson left. She told the police that she believed that there were children to be found who would tell some similar to hers.

Immediately after Miss Webberson had concluded, the police sent for the person whose name she gave them. He was questioned for three hours and then confronted with Miss Webberson. What he said to his questioners they refused to make public.

Try to Establish Motive.

It is known, however, that the officers are searching for corroborative evidence of the information furnished them by the young woman, which they believe is of the greatest importance in establishing a motive for the death of the child, something they had been unable before to do.

The inquest began at 1:30 in the probate court room of the county courthouse before Associate Justice Hutchison. District Attorney Thomas E. Grover of Canton conducted the case, assisted by State Officers Flynn, Grady and Scott and Chief Drugan of Dedham.

In the courtroom during the inquest were the implements used by the murderer when he crushed out the life of the little girl. They are three large rocks, each one blood-stained, and one still retaining some strands of the child's brown hair.

Three witnesses appeared.

Fred Noth, Cosmo and Celia Di Biasi.

Dr. Andrew J. Hodgdon and Dr. John W. Pratt, medical examiners, who performed the autopsy; Mr. and Mrs. Domilie Staula, parents of the child; Mrs. Mary Morello, sister of Louise; Mr. and Mrs. John Noth, parents of Fred Noth; Mrs. Philomina Di Biasi, mother of Cosmo and Celia, and Patrolman Charles J. Hatch.

ROYAL BLUE FLYER WRECKED; 20 HURT

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., May 29.—A crowded observation parlor car on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's Royal Blue Lins Limited plunged over an embankment at Garret, near here, about noon to-day. Twenty passengers were injured, three probably fatally.

Physicians and nurses were at once hurried to the scene on a special train.

The train was running on schedule time at the rate of a mile a minute, when the observation car left the rails at a sharp curve, plunged along the track and heaved for a whole length over a stone embankment.

On account of the heat the observation platform was crowded with passengers. With the first crash of the trucks many of these jumped to the ground, while others inside the car hurled themselves through the windows.

The wounded, after having their injuries hastily dressed, were taken to Cumberland, Md.

DEFAULT BONDS OF SUPPOSED SUICIDE

On the assumption that William F. Mitchell, the attorney who was reported to have committed suicide, is still alive, a default was entered against him in Superior Criminal Court yesterday. He was under indictment for forgery and uttering and larceny.

Bolt will be brought against his bondsmen to recover on the bond for $3,000.

Mitchell was supposed to have jumped from a Portland boat Sunday night.

PATROLMAN STOPS RUNAWAY HORSE

The heroic action of Patrolman Daniels of Station 10, Roxbury, was all that saved many persons who had gathered to watch the schoolboys' parade in the vicinity of the State House to-day, from serious injury when a horse attached to a wagon, driven by Thomas Kelly of Wabon, dashed toward the crowd. Officer Daniels seized the bridle and succeeded in bringing the horse to a stop. The team was owned by Skinner, Foote & Co.

TWO CHARGED WITH PERJURY

SALEM, May 29.—Two government witnesses, Frederick L. Hood of Dorchester and Horace H. Adams of Somerville, were arrested upon order of Judge Sterns in Superior Criminal Court to-day on a charge of perjury in connection with testimony they gave against John T. Collins of Newburyport, who to-day was discharged after a trial upon the charge of selling liquor illegally.

"Such evidence as these men gave is an outrage to the court," Judge Stearns remarked as the case ended. Thereupon the Judge sent deputies out after Hood and Adams and had them brought into court. They were held in bonds of $1,000 each.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE BASEBALL GROUNDS, Boston, May 29.—The first double-header of the season on the local grounds was pulled off this afternoon, when the Red Sox clashed with the Washingtons. It was a fine day and a big crowd took advantage of the bargain card.

The double-header was the result of a game postponed on account of rain when the Washingtons were here last month. Both the Red Sox and the Washingtons were in good shape for the battle. Both teams have been going fast lately, and while they are fighting to keep out of fallend position they are not far behind the other clubs in the race.

If the Red Sox can keep up their record for the past week they will soon be close to the leaders. All their pitchers are now working well, but so are the Washington twirlers for that matter, and the locals will have to play ball all the time to come out ahead.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Little Milan couldn't hit the ball as far as Morgan and the Missouri ran up for his weak splash and tossed him out at first. Ganley soaked a hard grounder just out of McConnell's reach. Delehanty struck out. Ganley started to steal on the pitch, but Criger's grand throw to Wagner easily nipped him. NO RUNS.

McConnell led off with a high bounder over second for a single. Lord failed to bunt, and it was up to him to hit it out. He drove a hard grounder to the box which Gates knocked down too late to get Amby at second. So he threw to first in time to retire Lord. Cravath struck out, and McConnell was caught trying to steal third, Street to Altizer. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Wagner made a great stop of Pickering's hard rap and Unglaub made a nice pickup of Wagner low throw, retiring the runner. Altizer popped a little fly which fell into Morgan's hands. Street went easy meat for Wagner and Unglaub. NO RUNS.

Gessler was hit on the thigh by a pitched ball. He went down on the first ball pitched, but was out, Street to McBride. Altizer handled Unglaub's rap in nice style for an out at first. Sullivan popped to Delehanty. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Freeman drove a single over McConnell's head. McBride pushed to Criger. Cates, who is a fat, podgy little fellow, drove a liner to Gessler. Milan duplicated Cates's drive. NO RUNS.

Altizer threw out Wagner. Pickering made a fine running catch of Criger's pop fly a few feet back of second base. Morgan grounded to Freeman. NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

Ganley drove a liner over Gessler's head to the right field fence for three bases. Gessler made a splendid catch of Delehanty's line drive. Pickering rolled a grounder which neither Unglaub or McConnell could have got, but the ball went between them, and Ganley scored. Gessler flied to Criger. Pickering was out stealing. Wagner making a grand play of Criger's low throw. ONE RUN.

Delehanty tossed out McConnell. Freeman fumbled Lord's grounder, but picked the ball up and got to the bag ahead of Harry. Cravath landed on one of Cates's outcurves and drove the ball to the corner of the outfield bleachers in centre field for a home run, the longest hit seen in the grounds this year. Gessler lined a single to right. Unglaub flied to Milan. ONE RUN.

FIFTH INNING.

Street was called out on strikes. Freeman soaked one at Morgan and was thrown out at first. McBride was easy for McConnell and Unglaub. NO RUNS.

Sullivan flied to Milan. Altizer threw out Wagner. McBride threw out Criger. NO RUNS.

CHEER 2,600 BOYS IN HIGH SCHOOL PARADE.

YOUTHFUL SOLDIERS MARCH LIKE VETERANS THROUGH STREETS OF BOSTON.

Five regiments of Boston High School Cadets, led by five bands and two drum corps, marched through the streets of Boston to-day to the strains of martial music. The High School Cadet Corps is in better condition than it ever was, and made the best display it ever did despite the raw, cold weather.

Indifferent to chilling wind, the boys strode through the business streets of Boston with the swing of small veterans. All along the line of march thousands crowded to the curb stone to cheer the brave little fellows and to admire their soldierly bearing.

More than twenty-six hundred of the high school soldiers were in line. For months Colonel George H. Benyon, instructor of military drill, and Dr. Thomas Harrington, director of the department of hygiene, have been working to bring the entire corps up to its present degree of efficiency.

Review Young Soldiers.

Major Gratwick, a British soldier, of the Devon Volunteers, reviewed the parade at the corner of Summer and Washington streets. He was dressed in full uniform. Lieutenant-Governor Draper was at the State House to see the young soldiers march by, and at City Hall Mayor Hibbard bowed his acknowledgements to the boys. On the Common the Boston High School Board reviewed the parade. It was really a brave and inspiring showing that the long column made as it swung rapidly along in splendid marching order.

To-day, for the first time, the new Fifth Regiment was in the line of march. It was given second place among the regiments, and it looked natty in spick and span new uniforms. Colonel George H. Benyon was in the full uniform of the brigade staff of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, of which he is a member. He was at the head of the column.

The different commands of the Boston High School Brigade marched to headquarters at the Eagleo High School before 9 o'clock to-day led by their respective headmasters, where they were all turned over to the command of Colonel Benyon. The cadets of the English High, Boston Latin, Brighton, East Boston, Charlestown, South Boston, Roxbury, West Roxbury and Dorchester were promptly at the starting point.

Pupils See Parade.

Each of these schools was granted full holidays to-day and the Normal, Girls' High, Girls' Latin, Girls' High of Practical Art, High School of Commerce and the Mechanic Arts High were dismissed to see the parade from the Common.

The route was as follows: Right of line on Clarendon street near Chandler street. The brigade moved through Clarendon street to Columbus avenue to Park square, to Boylston, Tremont, Winter, Summer, High, Franklin, Broad, State, Washington, School, Beacon to the Charles-Beacon-streets gate of the Common.

ROOSEVELT WAS ANGERED BY MELLEN

Defeat of Dolliver Said to Have Figured in Bringing of New Haven Suit.

NEW HAVEN, May 29.—Officials of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, still astounded over the government suit against them under the Sherman law, are to-day telling a story which they declare explains the action.

The story is this: Charles F. Brooker, chairman of the New Haven's finance committee and a member of the Republican National Committee, voted at Chicago on May 16 against Roosevelt's choice for temporary chairman of the coming National Convention—Senator J. F. Dolliver of Iowa.

Roosevelt, in return for this self-supposed slap, allowed Attorney-General Bonaparte and United States District Attorney French of Massachusetts, to bring the suit, which they had tried in vain to bring before. He got back at Brooker personally by putting the railroad in trouble.

President's Answer to Mellen.

More than that, the President is said to have admitted doing so. According to the story, when President Mellen hurried to Washington and asked Mr. Taft the meaning of the unexpected action was, he answered:

"Just this: If you can't control Brooker, I can't control the Attorney-General!"

The New Haven officials said it was the only explanation they could reasonably accept, in view of the fact that President Mellen has always been regarded as President Roosevelt's personal adviser on railroad matters, and the New Haven has always, apparently, have been operated in a manner that met President Roosevelt's approval.

There was no intimation of such a suit before the Chicago meeting of the Republican National Committee, and repeated attempts had been made to see the New Haven, by both Bonaparte and French. Evidence had been gathered tending to prove it an offender against the anti-trust laws. But Roosevelt balked the final action.

Angered by Chicago Defeat.

The President's defeat at the Chicago meeting angered him greatly. He was very confident that either his first choice, Senator Dolliver, or his second choice, Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, would be selected as temporary chairman of the national convention.

But Chairman Harry New of the National Committee; Senator Nathan B. Scott of West Virginia, and Charles F. Brooker of the New Haven, turned in against both Dolliver and Beveridge. They supported Senator Julius Caesar Burrows of Michigan, the choice of the allies for the Job, and Burrows was selected.

In his burst of temper, the story told here to-day has it, the President immediately cast about for some way of retaliation against those who had defied his wishes. Unable to find any immediate punishment for New or Scott, he got back at Brooker through the suit.

TELLS LAWYERS WHAT THEY MAY OR MAY NOT DO

Bar Association Drafts New Canon of Ethics For the Profession.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Members of a committee of the American Bar Association, of which Judge Alton B. Parker is chairman, have made public a draft for the proposed canon of ethics for lawyers, on which the committee has completed work after a three days' session in Washington.

The final report will be submitted to the entire bar association at its annual session in August at Seattle.

Under the new canons this is what a lawyer may do:

May defend a person of crime although he knows him to be guilty.

Publication or ordinary business cards is not per se improper. May refuse retainers. He is not obliged to act for any person who may wish to become his client.

Must observe the statute law, though before it is interpreted by adjudication he is free to advise as to its validity.

Must exact of clients strictest compliance with moral law.

May accept compensation only from client, or with his knowledge and approval.

What he may not do:

The office does not permit violation of law or any manner of fraud.

Solicitation of business by advertisements is unprofessional.

May not offer professional advice to persons who have not sought it.

Should not render services involving disloyalty to the law or disrespect to judicial office.

Improper speech to adverse witnesses and suitors is improper.

May not employ agents nor pay those who bring him clients.

MYOPIA CLUB DOGS SHOT IN FEAR OF RABIES

Whole Pack of 78 Fine Hounds Sacrificed When Scourge Appeared.

The entire pack of the Myopia Hunt Club's famous foxhounds have been shot because it was suspected that they were infected with rabies. They were fifty-two dogs and twenty-six puppies—the very finest of their sort in the land. In value they ranged from $25 up, totalling in the neighborhood of $2,500.

The pack was bred from dogs imported from England. For years they have led the Myopia hunters over Essex County hill and dale.

When two or three of the dogs grew sick recently the symptoms shown disquieted the trainers. When one of the dogs died his head was packed in ice and shipped to Dr. Langdon Frothingham, instructor in bacteriology at the Harvard Medical School. His diagnosis showed rabies to be the cause of death.

The same symptoms which had manifested themselves in the case of the dog which died then were observed in others of the pack. After consultation the committee felt that a death verdict was the only absolutely safe solution.

Only a few of the dogs were affected, apparently, but this drastic action was taken rather than endanger any human life.

Yesterday afternoon was the time appointed, and the unsuspecting hounds were led one by one and shot.

Another pack will be established as soon as possible. The new hounds will also be imported from England.

REVEAL SECRET OF WRIGHT BROTHERS' AEROPLANE

CONSTRUCTION OF WONDERFUL FLYING MACHINE THAT SURPRISED THE WORLD.

NEW YORK, May 29.—How the Wright brothers constructed their wonderful aeroplane, how they operated and steered it in the tests which have surprised the world was explained to-day. Heretofore the inventors have been successful in keeping secret every detail of the construction of their machine.

According to the explanation, the flying machine is composed of two thin aeroplanes superposed.

While these planes remain always parallel, they may be curved by the action of the operator so that the twin surfaces change their angle to the wind.

The planes are a structure of strong wood or metal, covered in linen, and move in the direction of their broader side. The two planes are separated by uprights or stanchions which are rigid from one end to the other. At the front of the machine are enforcing cross wires which, with the stanchions, bind the front part of the machine perfectly rigid.

The front of the wings is to be held unchanged at all times.

The flexibility of the wings is confined to the rear, where it is controlled by a very ingenious mechanism. At the middle of the machine are fore and aft wires which keep rigid the whole of the centre of the structure.

But between the stanchions, which separate the wings at the rear, there are no stiffening wires, and none extends fore and aft at the extremities of the wings.

These extremities (or wings) are flexible at the rear, and the structure is articulated at the limits of the rigid central part.

The parts of the frames extending beyond this central part form a pliant framework, and are held in any desired position by a wire running from the upper end of the rear stanchions at the extremities of the wings through guides or pulleys near the centre fixed to the lower wing or plane.

The wire communicates simultaneously a lateral twist to the wings of the two planes, presenting variable angles of incidence to the air, the side presenting the greater angle of incidence being obliged to rise under the greater pressure resulting from the action of the air on this part, whereas the side offering the smaller angle of incidence falls.

The action permits the navigator, by regulating the angles of incidence, to maintain the lateral equilibrium of the machine, but this action tends to make the machine turn around a vertical axis.

To counteract this effect a vertical rudder is placed at the rear of the machine, movable by a wire cable permitting the rudder to exert a pressure on the side of the machine on which the wing offers the greater angle of incidence to the air.

A turning movement can be produced by the combination of these operating in different directions.

The framework of the machine may be one of those forms and the pressure on the vertical rudder placed behind the centre of the machine may be the other.

In the construction of the machine, the inertia of the machine is combined with the forces produced by the pressure of the air on the vertical surfaces, consisting of a rudder placed in front of the centre of the machine and of a fixed surface, preferably situated in front of the centre of gravity of the machine.

HUB LAWYER ARRESTED IN PERJURY CASE

Attorney Frank Wright Accused of Subornation in Worcester.

WORCESTER, May 28.—Frank C. Wright, a Boston lawyer, faces a charge of subornation of perjury, upon which he was arrested yesterday by order of Judge F. A. Gaskill of the Superior Criminal Court. Bail was fixed at $1,000.

The arrest is the result of the secret indictments brought by the Grand Jury against Mary A. Balch and Harry E. Murphy of Ludlow, Vt., and Nellie M. Decker of Lynn, who were before Judge Gaskill on the charge of perjury in connection with the divorce suit brought in 1900 by Mary A. Balch against her husband, Burton A. Balch, also of Ludlow, Vt. Mrs. Balch, Murphy and Mrs. Decker are alleged to have given false testimony on behalf of Mrs. Balch in her divorce suit.

Murphy was sentenced to the House of Correction for one year, and Mrs. Decker to the women's prison at Sherborn. The case against Mrs. Balch was continued, although she pleaded guilty. She is an important witness in civil suits against her father and mother in the Vermont courts, and the Vermont laws would prevent her from testifying after sentence had been passed on the charge of perjury.

Mrs. Balch to-day testified that she lived in Ludlow, and in seeking a divorce from her husband retained Frank C. Wright of Boston to prosecute her libel in the Superior Court in Worcester, in May, 1900. She carnes Wright with suggesting to her that she get some one to tell a story of having seen her husband with another woman in a hotel in Middlebury, Vt., and it was agreed that Murphy should tell this story.

Murphy in court testified that he told the story in court and it was not true. Murphy told the Court that Wright told him in his office in Boston that there were few divorce cases in which the truth was ever told.

TO SWEEP SEAS IN PURSUIT OF OUTLAW SHIP

NEW YORK, May 29.—The National Manufacturers' Association was to-day added to the growing list of seekers after the ex-Clyde liner Goldsboro, which sailed out of this port twenty-six days ago after a brush with the revenue officials.

Some of the members of the big association had shipments of freight on the Goldsboro when she slipped away, and they are worried about their money.

A. Parker Nevin, counsel for the association, says that some members are willing to fit out a special steamer manned with marines, if possible, to capture the Goldboro.

Not a word of the old liner has come from any of the Central American ports, for which she might have been heading. The British consul here and the United States Treasury officials expect to hear as soon as she reaches any port, for Secretary Goldsboro has become an outlaw ship.

For a day or two after she sailed she was a British vessel and had the right to fly the Union Jack. Then irregularities of a serious nature were found in the application by which her papers had been granted, and her papers were revoked and notice was sent to the ports at which she was likely to call.

MERCHANT 14 WEEKS IN JAIL FOR CONTEMPT

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 29.—Carroll H. Chapman, a member of the bankrupt dry goods firm of Young & Holland, is still a prisoner at the county jail to-day, where he has spent fourteen weeks for contempt of court because he answered questions at a hearing in a manner unsatisfactory to Judge Brown.

He had also failed to comply with the order of the Court to produce certain books and papers relating to the examination during the celebration of Old Home Week has been doubled. It was feared that the presence of two more wealthy women as Mrs. Sage and Miss Gould might be too great a temptation for cranks.

Fred Johnson, a deputy sheriff, is in charge of a detail of special officers, and the trustees of the village have provided another detail, in charge of Andrew Gilbride.

HEART BROKEN, VAINLY SEEKS BRIDE-TO-BE

John Gay, a city employe, living at No. 27 Clarendon street, is to-day making diligent search for Mrs. John Lockwood, whose last residence was at Hotel Carroll, No. 225 Dower street. Mrs. Lockwood was to have become an bride last night, but failed to appear at the time set for the wedding and Gay is heartbroken.

He says that the last time he saw his fiancee was one week ago last Wednesday, when they practically completed arrangements to have the ceremony performed last night.

A few days later Mr. Gay called to see Mrs. Lockwood, but was much surprised when informed that she was not at home and that no one knew of her whereabouts. Since that time no word has been heard from her.

Mr. Gay is about fifty years, clean shaven and about five feet eight inches tall. He is well known and respected in the district where he lives. Mrs. Lockwood, who although married two years ago to a John Lockwood of this city, is about 30 years of age, and has been a widow for two years.

FALLING CEILING BURIES 2 WORKMEN

By the falling of a ceiling at the new hospital building for the Soldiers' Home on Powderhorn hill, Chelsea, late yesterday, Michael Travis, thirty-five years old, of No. 296 Washington street, Roslindale, and William Hill, forty-six years old, of No. 74 Reid street, Roslindale, who were at work plastering, were buried in the debris. At the United States Marine Hospital, where they were taken, it was stated to-day that they were severely bruised on the [illegible] shoulders and back.

EXPLAIN VOTES ON LICENSE BILL

At the Dorchester municipal building, on Columbia road, last evening, Representative William H. O'Brien and his colleague, Herbert S. Frost, told why they had helped to kill the local option measure in the Legislature this year.

Mr. O'Brien said that the reason he had voted against the measure was that it would be hard to get for license right out of nine [illegible], and he opposed the measure because he regarded that position as the true sentiment of the ward. The explanation of Mr. Frost was along the same lines.

Representative Howard Mildram told of a visit to Governor Guild at the time when the latter promised that there should be no more licenses granted in Dorchester. Shortly after two more were granted, and when Mr. Mildram went to see the Governor about it His Excellency asked him to call again, when the entire board would be present. At that meeting the true reason for the licenses were granted in Dorchester he would expect the resignation of the board at once.

HELEN GOULD AND MRS. SAGE UNDER GUARD

NEW YORK, May 29.—Miss Helen Gould is visiting Mrs. Russell Sage at the Hustling Mansion in Sag Harbor, and the special ground provided for Mrs. Sage's protection during the celebration of Old Home Week has been doubled. It was feared that the presence of two more wealthy women as Mrs. Sage and Miss Gould might be too great a temptation for cranks.

Fred Johnson, a deputy sheriff, is in charge of a detail of special officers, and the trustees of the village have provided another detail, in charge of Andrew Gilbride.

LYNN COUPLE AGED 60, WALK TO PORTLAND

PORTLAND, Me., May 29.—Few people at the age of sixty years would have the courage to attempt to walk from Boston to Portland, but that is just what Mr. and Mrs. William H. Morrison, of Lynn, Mass., They are not content with this 100-mile walk, however, but started to-day to walk to Bridgton, and after a stay there for a few days they will start on a trip over the White Mountains and back to West Lynn, Mass., where they make their home.

When it is taken into consideration that Mr. Morrison is sixty years of age and that his wife is only three years younger, their trip is all the more remarkable.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrison are taking this walk for pleasure and for Mr. Morrison's health. They are not trying to break Weston's record and are enjoying the scenery and all the pleasures on a pedestrian tour when taking long walks. Mr. Morrison is the proprietor of a large periodical store in West Lynn and a few weeks ago he was advised by a physician to get more exercise in the open air. Acting on the physician's advice, he and Mrs. Morrison began to walk daily and the most they ever do most every day would walk from twelve to twenty miles. They then decided on the Portland trip.

SETS TRAP FOR HORSE THIEVES; CATCHES WIFE

TAUNTON, May 29.—Horse thieves have been bothering the farmers of Raynham, and so Theodore A. Leonard, who runs a sawmill, set a trap to catch them. He left his buggy in an inviting position, with a horse nearby, and then unscrewed the nuts from the axles of the carriage. "They will get in the buggy and drive like thunderation. Then, when the wheels come off, there will be something doin'," he said.

The town constables were taken into the confidence of Farmer Leonard, and they allowed that his was the best scheme for catching thieves yet proposed. Everything was in readiness for a midnight pursuit of the thieves when Mr. Leonard retired.

"Guess I'll go to meetin' at the church, Theo," said Mrs. Leonard next morning. "All right," said Theodore, as he harnessed the gray mare to the buggy. Mrs. Leonard drove away, and when the wheels came off she was thrown, sustaining severe injuries, and the gray mare kicked in the carriage before running away. Theodore Leonard handled the brief trap when his wife and the remnants of his carriage were carried home. Mrs. Leonard is under a physician's care.

FAKE TICKETS SPOIL OUTING CLUB'S PICNIC

Unprincipled Jokers Invite 300 Guests to Exclusive Banquet.

Special to the Boston American.

MANCHESTER, N. H., May 29.—Who sent 300 "fake" invitations to the Spring opening and banquet of the Central Outing Club, which the twenty-one club members had arranged for themselves alone?

The "fake" invitations broke up the banquet. They made the Central Outing Club members hopping mad. They brought the wrath of several score of would-be diners down on the heads of the Central Outing Club and the guilty counterfeiters alike. And the whole mix-up threatens to disrupt present political plans in the Eighteenth Senatorial District on account of this multiple soreness.

The Central Outing Club members are busy dodging explanations on the one hand and sleuthing for the guilty people on the other.

Rivals Laugh at Outing Crowd.

The Pinehurst Associates, a rival political organization, are laughing to split over the whole matter. The Pinehurst's camp adjoins the Central Outing Club's quarters on the shore of Lake Massabesic. At the very time when the Central Outing men were trying to keep the holders of "fake" invitations from entering their place the Pinehurst crowd looked on with cheerful grins from their own grounds. The Pinehurst quarters also had a brand new "sweet" sign saying "For Members Only" on the door. The Central Outing men are wondering if that was any particle significant in this affair.

The Central Outing Club is made up of city office holders and business men, who, as one member expresses it, "like a good time, and can afford it." John Burke, president, and its members include Aldermen, City Hall "pols" and other influential men to the number of twenty-one. To counteract the ugly mix-up every quarter they planned this "private" dinner.

A few days before the opening the county was flooded with counterfeit tickets, signed "The Committee," and inviting the recipients to be present.

The recipients included men from Governor Floyd and Mayor Moore down to various "hungry ones" and political grafters. The Governor and Mayor and some others did not "bite," but about two hundred others did.

The grafters especially saved their appetites for the "big feed."

Word of the "fake tickets" came to the club members about the time of the banquet time. They stuck a Board of Health philanthropic card on the clubhouse, barricaded all doors and windows and tried to stave off the onslaught of would-be banqueters. But the latter were finally admitted as near as New Hampshire and had "to be shown."

Couldn't See the Joke.

To make it worse, some of the "fake" ticket holders were political allies of the club and didn't take it at all as a joke. Some of the club members sneaked out and paddled out on the lake in the first boats they could impound, hoping to escape the jokers.

The disappointed horde, when convinced there was "nothing doing" in the banquet line, departed vowing vengeance, with sundry remarks that the coming spring would show something to the Central Outing Club bunch.

Brouillet Choked Me Tried to Drown Baby,' Swears Wife on Stand

WIFE OF BACK BAY DENTIST TESTIFIES IN SENSATIONAL DIVORCE SUIT.

Pale and haggard and evidently suffering severely from the effects of his confinement, Dr. George A. Brouillet, his former jack Boy dentist, now serving a sentence of two years in Jail behind for an assault with a hatchet upon his brother-in-law James Lane, was led into the Suffolk Divorce Court between two prison officers this morning to appear later as a witness in his own behalf in the action for divorce brought against him by his wife, Fara Lane Brouillet.

The trial is under way this afternoon before Judge Fox, the courtroom is filled with curious spectators, including a number of Back Bay society people who were last friends of the dentist and his wife, the testimony is stirring and public by the morning proceedings, the case promises to be extremely sensational.

Asks Custody of Children.

Dr. Brouillet's appearance is under a writ of habeas corpus, granted by the courts last Saturday. He is fighting his wife's suit and asks the court to award him the custody of their two children, George A. Jr., now four years old, and Lilly, aged eighteen months. The children are now in the custody of the mother at the living with her at No. 387 Walnut avenue, Roxbury.

In citizen's dress and with barred beard, Dr. Brouillet walked into the court room at 10:30 a. m. and took a seat directly opposite his wife. They glanced at each other, but no signs of recognition passed between them. Dr. Brouillet did not speak to any one.

Mrs. Brouillet, looking extremely pretty in a neat fitting blue suit, a black sailor hat and wearing a long veil, was the first witness. Her testimony was practically as follows:

Married at Vineyard Haven.

Questioned by her attorney, Frederic W. Bliss, she said she and Dr. Brouillet were married on October 22, 1901, at Vineyard Haven, Mass., in a Baptist church. They went to live afterward at No. 362 Commonwealth avenue, where they remained until the night of the doctor's assault upon her brother.

Mrs. Brouillet told of the trouble she and her husband had. Their quarrels, she said, were periodical.

Threatened Suicide.

"On December 10, 1907," Mrs. Brouillet testified, "the doctor said that because of financial trouble he was going to kill himself and leave me in the gutter to support myself and the two young children.

"Previously—in October, the same year —he threatened to drown the children and myself like a rat, in the bath tub, which was filled with water. He took the seven months old baby, Louis, by the neck and tried to throw him into the bath tub. I rushed in, rescued the child and took both children upstairs to escape him.

Says Husband Choked Her.

"On the 10th of September, 1907, my husband choked me with both hands and threw me into a closet behind the hamper. I was insensible. It was some time before I came to. I went to my mother's home in Cambridge that night.

"During the third week of August, 1907, my husband choked me, leaving marks on my throat. During that same week, while I was nursing the youngest baby and had the oldest at my knee playing, the doctor showed a revolver to my head and said he would kill me. I shoved his arm away and screamed. I fainted. My babies ran away. I went into another room with them.

"Then he said he would kill himself. He went into his office, sat in the dentist's chair, opened his mouth and put the revolver into it. At just this moment the door bell rang. He dropped gun or to the floor, and was just as courteous to the patient who came in as if nothing else had happened.

During the first week of October, 1906, he also threatened to kill me. During the Easter holidays of 1906 he struck me and threatened to kill me, at the same time saying, 'I wish you were dead, you miserable thing.'

"Kicked and Tried to Stifle Me."

"On December 5, 1905, he choked me, breaking my brooch, one part of which became imbedded in my neck. At this time I took out the splint and threw an ink mean bottle at me, the head to suffocate me by knocking me down.

"On Feb. 5, 1905, he made me sit upon the floor in the library. He locked him self up with the children in the only bedroom of the house.

"On December 20, 1904, while I was nursing baby George, he grabbed the child with both hands by the throat and held him up until the baby became purple in the face. He said he would throw him out of the window. I took the child, once he said to me: 'The happiest day in my life will be when I come to you by the throat with both hands and choke you for the broke my heart to death, knowing at the same time that you can not get away.'

Sang to Support Babies.

"During the whole of our married life his general conduct has been cruel and slanderous. I supported him. He would went to the Castle Square Theatre, where I sang for five weeks. This was the time when he refused to put up the 'do' get with my two babies and kill himself. I did so the second night I was with my then; I got the engagement and was willing for me to appear on the stage in order to earn some money. Before I was married to the doctor I played at Keith's theatre for seven years and also sang in church for the same length of time. I am sure I can care for and support my two children whose custody I shall have always had the principal care of my children. There are many things I can do to support them. I can play a church organ or sing in church, and I have influential friends who have promised to help me.

"The children are now at No. 387 Walnut avenue, Roxbury, where I now live. I was given their temporary custody by the Probate Court."

WOMAN HELD IN RICH MALDEN MAN'S DEATH

AWAIT CORONER'S FINDING IN CASE OF CHAS. M. HOLMES IN NEW YORK HOTEL.

Mrs. Clara I. Moore of No. 520 West Forty-seventh street, New York, and Mrs. Georgie Smith, Complete Wells, who were taken to Jefferson Market Court to-day in New York, according to leased wire dispatches to the HERALD AMERICAN, are questioned about the illness of Charles Mead Holmes, the wealthy Malden leather merchant, who dropped dead in the lobby of the Holland House on Fifth avenue, West Forty-seventh street apartment house, were passed by Coroner Hoeber. The women were jarraled in the custody of Attorney White until the autopsy on the body of Mr. Holmes had been completed.

Dr. Fitzsimmons, the electric cab conductor, who carried the sick man from Mrs. Moore's to the hotel, and the elevator boy of the Forty-seventh street apartment house, were also held for inquest. The authorities have found every indication that Holmes died of heart trouble, to which he was subject.

Mrs. Holmes, wife of the dead leather merchant, is prostrated to-day in her stately mansion at No. 50 Glen street, Malden, where she is constantly attended by the family physician.

To-day to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter Mrs. Holmes's sister, who lives with her, declared that no one in the Holmes family had ever heard of Mrs. Moore.

Says Mistake Has Been Made.

She declared that some mistake must have been made, and that someone is endeavoring to foist a scandal on the name of Mr. Holmes, who, she said, was above such a thing. If he knew her at all, for he had known as much as mentioned her name to her sister.

While on her way to the Jefferson Market Court, Mrs. Moore, to-day, Mrs. Moore declared that she had known Mr. Holmes for the past fifteen years, but that she had not seen him for four months as he had to be called at her house last night, she said he was attacked with vertigo about fifteen minutes after he had been in her house and that she had sent him to the station at his own request.

Holmes's attorney said to-day to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that her brother-in-law had been spending much heart trouble for more than six years. She declared that he was subject to it and attempted to climb the high hill leading to Forest street, Malden, that he had to stop repeatedly because of his heart.

Mrs. Holmes declared that she could see there is no reason for believing that Mr. Holmes was the victim of any plot to take his own life. Heart failure is believed by some of the authorities to have been the cause of the death. Coroner's Physician Weston, who was the bishop of the Hoffman House last night when Mr. Holmes staggered in and a moment later fell dead, believes he died of heart disease.

After her arrest Mrs. Moore told the police that Mr. Holmes called to see her last night and very soon afterward complained of feeling ill. At his request, she said, she had her maid call an ambulance. The two women, with the elevator boy and Fitzsimmons, the cabman, with great difficulty, placed Holmes in the vehicle. Then Fitzsimmons drove at top speed to the Hoffman House.

Mr. Holmes climbed out of the cab with Fitzsimmons's assistance, staggered into the lobby of the hotel and fell dead.

Complained of Illness.

Mr. Holmes arrived in New York yesterday. He had telegraphed for a room. Clerk Harrington, who knew him, reserved one. Mrs. Gill and he was known to the room when he registered he said he only intended remaining a day or two. He was not seen later until he staggered into the lobby in his dying state.

Mrs. Moore, who is about thirty-five years of age and very attractive, said that when Mr. Holmes called last night he told her he was glad to see her. She said they had not met for four months. He went into the front room.

"Then I saw a queer look in his face," said Mrs. Moore, "and he tried to rise from his chair. He put his hand over his heart and said, 'I'm very ill. Get me to the Hoffman House quick.'

"I called the elevator boy and he and my maid got an electric cab. I and my maid and the elevator boy helped Mr. Holmes into the elevator and then into the cab. I saw he was very ill, but I knew he suffered from his heart and thought the trouble would soon be over.

"Mr. Holmes had often spoken to me about his wife and I understood that he lived in Malden. He was prosperous and plenty of money and when he was last in New York he said he was prospering.

Won Wealth in China Trade.

Mr. Holmes was born in Denmark seventy-two years ago, but his sister-in-law said he had removed here with his parents while still a child, and they had lived in Forest street, Malden, for many years. While a mere boy, Mr. Holmes went to China, where he soon engaged in the slip trade. He prospered and in China laid the foundations of his present fortune.

Some thirty-five years ago he came back to America and married the lady who is now in charge of his residence. About fifteen years ago he moved to Malden and established the business of the firm of Holmes & Kimball. The latter died soon after and Holmes became the head of the firm. It is located at No. 83 Worthwood street, South Boston. After the death of Wesley Kimball, former Mayor of Newton, died, the firm was continued unincorporated. Holmes & Kimball, its business up until the day of his death. He has but recently retired from a business trip through the West.

Holmes is survived by his wife. They have no children. He was a member of Wyoming Lodge of Masons of Melrose.

IMMENSE FRAUD IN NEW YORK ELECTION

NEW YORK, May 29.—Two more ballot boxes—the ninth and tenth to be examined—were opened to-day in the recount proceedings before Supreme Court Justice Gaynor. With a gain of sixty-eight votes already to the credit of William Randolph Hearst, interest in the courtroom became intense with the progress of the revised count.

The two boxes opened to-day were those of the Eleventh Election District of the Fourth Assembly District and the Fifteenth Election District of the Twenty-fourth Assembly District. The first of the two boxes opened to-day shows a net gain for Hearst of three votes. The official count gave McClellan 158, but this was cut down to 155 when the court threw out thirteen of the official ballots which had been counted for the Mayor. Hearst's count of 158 stood unchanged.

Every ballot box thus far opened has disclosed additional evidence, as well as new methods of "beating the count" on the part of the so-called "bi-partisan" boards of election representing the two old political machines in this city. The discoveries demonstrated further the glaring disregard for an honest count of ballots as well as an open defiance for the plain provisions of the election law.

Forty-one votes fraudulently counted for McClellan in the last mayoralty election, on November 7, 1905, were found in the six ballot boxes opened yesterday in the two warrants proceedings before Justice Lambert in the Supreme Court.

These votes, with the twenty-seven which were found to have been counted disfranchisingly for McClellan in the two boxes opened on Wednesday, furnished a total of sixty-eight for the first eight ballot boxes, reducing McClellan's plurality on the face of the returns to 2,490.

Stolen Votes Found.

In the first box opened thirteen votes cast for William R. Hearst for mayor were found to have been deliberately stolen from his total. Having deducted many inspectors added ten to McClellan's count and the Republicans added three to the total for William M. Ivins.

In the second box opened, three ballots for Blank ballots had been counted for McClellan, and in the next box one was taken from Hearst's total and two were added to McClellan's. In another three votes were taken from Hearst and six added to McClellan's. In many respects the disclosures during the recount yesterday were more startling than were developed during the first day.

The first box opened showed a change in the count of Mr. Hearst of twenty-three votes. This was not a surprise to everybody in the courtroom. Even Justice Lambert appeared to be aroused over the flagrant exhibition of a willful miscount.

"Where are the tally sheets?" he asked, and he inquired, as soon as Clarence J. Shearn finished reading the results of the recount, "Who were the inspectors of election in this district and where is their tally sheet?"

Create a Sensation.

Counsel for McClellan sought to pacify the Court by handing up a copy of the City Record containing the official canvass.

"The tally sheets," he said, "are on file down in the County Clerk's office now."

"Then let's have them," said the Court. "I want to know what was done, and who was responsible for it this time, and I want it at once."

This demand by the Court for the documents made only a slight impression on the inspectors of election after the Court created a sensation in the courtroom.

WOMEN HATPIN STABBERS FINED

The two negro women, who last night started a riot on Tremont street, by stabbing half a score of men with hatpins, were fined $15 and $15 respectively by Judge Sly in police court this morning. The woman who was fined $15 was Rose Rickard, the one fined $10, and the other who gave the name of Louise Simms, of Rose fined $10. Both were committed to jail pending the payment of their fines.

J. J. SLATTERY BURIED.

John J. Slattery, Jr., the well-known ball player, who died at his home, No. 22 North avenue, Roxbury, on Wednesday last, was buried in Calvary Cemetery, West Roxbury, to-day. Services were held at St. Paul's Catholic Church. There was a profusion of floral designs.

W. R. Hearst Puts Himself at Disposition Of Justice Lambert

The following letter was made public to-day by Clarence J. Shearn, special counsel to the Attorney-General in the quo warranto proceedings:

My Dear Mr. Shearn:

I see by the papers that just as I am departing for a brief vacation Mr. McClellan's lawyers suddenly decide that my presence is somehow or other suddenly essential in the recount case.

Why am I wanted and for what? I suppose that is merely a mere preliminary to some further delay or else a personal annoyance, but if Judge Lambert himself should indicate to you any wish that I should return, or should suggest in the faintest way the desirability of my being present, I should regard the matter in an entirely different light, and would abandon my vacation and return at once.

It is amusing, isn't it, that "Mayor" McClellan, while in public office and being paid by the citizens to attend to his duties, could leave the country and his case and spend all of last Summer abroad, while I, a private citizen, who have been here in town, accessible for the past three years, cannot take a brief trip without submitting to such an alarming variety of "interviews" by assistant attorneys. Anyone would think it was I who had published the so-called "ballots" and that I was trying to take it away with me.

Kindly advise me to Queenstown. I shall be back early in July under any circumstances. Sincerely yours,

W. HEARST.

DEATH PENALTY FOR WHITMORE DEMANDED

PROSECUTOR MAKES FINAL ARGUMENT IN SWAMP MURDER TRIAL.

JERSEY CITY, May 29.—The arguments of counsel in the trial of Theodore R. Whitmore, accused of murdering his wife and casting her body into Lamphick Swamp last Christmas night, were concluded soon after noon to-day. The defendant may know his fate before night.

Prosecutor Terkpre, in summing up for the State, rendered at length the evidence against the accused.

"There is no question of this man's guilt," he declared. "When you twelve men take the oath and entered the box you found yourselves by a solemn oath to see that justice was done. The fact that the penalty is death is of no concern; all you have to do is to decide if this defendant's guilt is proven, and the State is satisfied of this, despite the sincere of the counsel for the defense."

In summing up for the defence, Attorney Simpson said:

"There is no doubt that the body found in the swamp was that of Lena Whitmore. But there is doubt that she was murdered. The testimony here shows that she died from drowning. The testimony also showed that she did not receive any blows that might have caused death. Whether she got off the train to see someone in Harrison, and in reading across the dark and dismal swamp became lost, and groping her way slowly fell into some out of the marshy pools and was drowned, no one in court can say. No evidence has been given to substantiate the allegation that she was murdered.

"The Man Was Not Whitmore."

"She had a friend in Harrison. Englert, testified that he had known her and seen her frequently in a year and a half.

"Coogan, the watchman, saw a woman just like this woman, accompanied by a man, going toward Lamphick swamp. He saw the man who was with her, both going down and coming back. He had a good look at the man, but when Whitmore confronted him he says: 'Whitmore was not the man. The man I saw was a much shorter man.

"This man, coming back, had a bundle under his arm and went across the bridge in the Passaic river, clinging to the docks, was found that he had what, as if carried by by the ride. There is no doubt that the man threw the bundle into the river, and according to Coogan this man was not Whitmore.

"How could Whitmore have got his wife to Harrison? Under what pretext to rob her son could he get her to go to that dark and lonely spot, when we have evidence to prove that she feared Whitmore? Lilly Pender said she was afraid to go home on Christmas Day. She feared violence at the hands of her husband. Do you suppose, if she told that to Lilly Pender, that she would accompany the same man to such a place as Lamphick swamp?

"Why All This Nonsense?"

"That is the direct testimony. That is all. But we are confronted by a mass of circumstances. Dickers says the train did give in jaunary, and then afterward he declares that he did not love his wife and wanted to put some one in her place. How incongruous! It is just like the whole case of the prosecution. Why all this nonsense? You will find it in all lessons of criminology. We find it advertised that one man may be a successful investigator. He takes the court and the taxpayers' money and puts some of the jury as his pawns and tools to vindicate his theory and to establish a reputation for himself.

"This case undoubtedly was prepared by this man, but when he comes to the touch stone of evidence his house of cards went to pieces.

"Oh, happy criminologist,
Who does not need the facts:
Who only watches, and the while,
His great imagination acts.

"He does not need to try to find,
The truth that may be hid,
He only needs to dream and dream,
And then the thing is did.

View Body by Candle Light.

"What have they got on this defendant? They say that the main part of this case depends on contradiction: that he tells one story one time and another on another time. This is not true. He has told the same story at all times. The State says that the defendant took his wife to Englert's son and there murdered her and afterwards failed to identify her. Didn't he get pictures of his wife and give them to reporters. Wasn't he as nas to do so if he had killed her? He was told by the newspaper reporters that the woman in the morgue was not his wife. He was taken to the morgue with a candle and shut out again after a moment or so. Do you remember the morgue keeper said? That he had examined the body by lamplight? This was denied by one of the State's witnesses. Mr. Cutler, who said the first time Whitmore had been gone there he had viewed the body by candle light.

He Wanted to Go Back.

"If he had wanted to evade the law, wouldn't he have gotten away as fast as possible? Would he have wanted to go back? And you have requested that he be allowed to view his wife's body again the reporters said, 'No,' and he himself was asked if he wanted to go back. He also went voluntarily to Captain Kuhne with two detectives, and by his conversation led Captain Kuhne to believe that the body in the morgue was that of his wife. Didn't he say, 'I want to go back and see the body again?' Wouldn't he go back and identify it?

"Is it strange that he did not say, 'This is not wife's body,' in the first instance? As has been testified, the body was badly decomposed, and State witnesses have testified it was impossible to identify it by photograph.

"Subjected to Torture."

"At the time of his arrest he had no counsel, and the authorities hung up his wife's clothing in front of his cell in order to try and intimidate him. For three days he was subjected to three hours in the afternoon, and three hours in the evening, he was subjected to practical torture. Isn't it a wonder that his mind was not unbalanced by the Cue tortures to which he was subjected? In the middle ages the poor wretch was placed upon the rack until he was unbalanced. Is it any wonder that a man undergoing such tortures would admit almost anything?

"But the truth prevailed and could not be downed. It was brought out in the testimony that three days before his wife's body was found on the twenty-second of December, he said he could sleep. She has gone away to the detectives. No over to Rodee's saloon and got some whisky. I left there at you you think, could I say some such thing if I were guilty of murder, would I go there?

"It's a pretty bad case when the prosecutor has to go on the witness stand to bolster up the case of a criminologist. Mr. Vicker's testimony didn't help the case a bit.

"Here is a bankbook that they produce. They have shown that neither could get the money without the presence of the other. The wife had the bankbook. The man wants to prevent himself and get the bank to get another book. He will admit that he lied, in order to get into new Pooler's house and found the bankbook. He didn't want to confess that he had lied to the banker when he told him that the old book had been burned, so he got a new one. When he was told that the book was all right he made no demand for the money. He made no inquiries as to how he could get it in the absence of his wife's death.

On the Bridge at 1:06.

"What are the facts in the case? They have tried to put this man in the Pennsylvania depot at 12:40 or 12:45. Quinn says he saw him in the depot at three quarter and was positive of the identification, because he knew him by his carriage. Can you discern the identity of a man positively by his carriage, three feet away at night in the dark? This man Quinn has defective eyesight. He admits it. May the Pennsylvania Railroad detective, who is trained to look for men, is himself quite room in the depot, testified that he had a good look at the man who was in the trouble that night at the Pennsylvania station, and he swears positively that Whitmore was not the man.

"Engel and Steinmetz on the Brooklyn bridge station at 1:06 in the morning. His train starts at 12:32. It would be assumed that if he was there at 1:06 to see if he was correct, he was there when the train started, and if clemens, in his test trip from the Jersey City station to the Brooklyn bridge, made the journey and arrived at the bridge at 1:06, going as fast as he could, do you believe that Whitmore could have made the journey before 1:06, if he'd been in Jersey? Their whole case falls down. There is not the slightest evidence that he was in Jersey City.

"I Demand Justice."

"The only danger in this case that I can see is the danger of mental contagion clemens, having hypnotized Vickers, Vickers places Englert under the spell of his will, there is a chance of that. Let them produce the evidence. That is what I am sorry. Fabric weaves from the imagination of Howell & Howell do not belong with the like men I lives in New Jersey.

"I demand justice as a citizen, and want you to tell me on your oaths and on your consciences whether there is one single fact that points to this man as a murderer. That is my case. I have left it to be rendered in this case. It is the case of Chaucus against Whitmore. Give a verdict in favor of New Jersey and justice."

CZAR THREATENS WAR ON PERSIA

TEHERAN, Persia, May 29.—Unless the Shah makes amends for the attack on the Russian financial agency here and the wounding of Agent Ostrogradski, he will have to fight the Czar. The Russian Minister's demands he fears he will precipitate a revolution.

Every effort is being made by the government to represent the attack on the ostracized but that three men were engaged in it, and that the agent's escape, received in the revolver battle which ended with the mysterious flight of the assailants.

BOY HURT BY FALL OFF CAR

Falling from a trolley car, on which he tried to ride, Edward Allen, seven years old, of No. 3638 Washington street, Forest Hills, was discovered lying unconscious on the street not far from his home yesterday afternoon.

The ambulance from Station 13 took young Allen to his home.

The police found that, while on his way to school in company with his nine-year-old playmate, Frank Greer of Hyde Park avenue, he had jumped on an automobile car and had fallen off, narrowly escaping death under the wheels. The car was not stopped.

This is the Way to Keep Well without Cascarets

Live outdoors, and let your work be exercise. Else walk ten miles a day.

Eat little meat, no white bread, no rich pastries. Eat many green vegetables, plenty of fruit, and bread made of whole wheat.

Do that, and you'll have little need of a laxative while you keep young.

But when you grow old, and the bowels become less active, you will need this help anyway.

Cascarets are for those who live indoors, who eat rich foods, who eat and drink too much.

This vegetable laxative does for them exactly what proper living would do.

It causes no irritation, as pill cathartics, salts and castor oil do. Its action is just as natural—just as gentle—as the action of laxative foods.

So choose your own way.

Give Nature the aid of proper food and exercise, else the help of Cascarets.

One way's as serviceable as the other. But some way is essential. For one cannot keep well unless the bowels move freely once every day.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by druggists, but you don't buy them in bulk. Be sure to get the genuine, with CCC on every tablet. The box is marked like this:

Cascarets
10 CENTS

The vest-pocket box is 10 cents. The month-treatment box 50 cents. 13,500,000 boxes sold annually.

ROOSEVELT WAS ANGERED BY MELLEN

Defeat of Dolliver Said to Have Figured in Bringing of New Haven Suit.

NEW HAVEN, May 29.—Officials of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, still astounded over the government suit against them under the Sherman law, are now telling a story which they declare explains the action.

The story is this: Charles F. Brooker, chairman of the New Haven's finance committee and a member of the Republican National Committee, voted at Chicago on May 16 against Roosevelt's choice for temporary chairman of the coming National Convention—Senator J. F. Dolliver of Iowa.

Roosevelt, in return for this self-supposed slap, allowed Attorney-General Bonaparte and United States District Attorney French of Massachusetts, to bring the suit, which they had tried in vain to bring before. He got back at Brooker personally by putting the railroad in trouble.

President's Answer to Mellen.

More than that, the President is said to have admitted doing so. According to the story, when President Mellen hurried to Washington and asked him what the meaning of the unexpected action was, he answered:

"Just this: If you can't control Brooker, I can't control the Attorney-General!"

The New Haven officials said it was the only explanation they could reasonably accept, in view of the fact that President Mellen has always been regarded as President Roosevelt's personal adviser on railroad matters, and the New Haven lines always, apparently, have been operated in a manner that met President Roosevelt's approval.

There was no intimation of such a suit before the Chicago meeting of the Republican National Committee. Several times attempts had been made to use the New Haven, by both Bonaparte and French. Evidence had been gathered leading to prove it an offender against the anti-trust laws. But Roosevelt never permitted action.

Angered by Chicago Defeat.

The President's defeat at the Chicago meeting angered him intensely. He was very confident that either his first choice, Senator Dolliver, or his second choice, Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, would be selected as temporary chairman of the national convention.

But Chairman Harry New of the National Committee; Senator Nathan B. Scott of West Virginia, and Charles F. Brooker of the New Haven, turned in against both Dolliver and Beveridge. They supported Senator Julius Caesar Burrows of Michigan, the choice of the administration for the job, and Burrows was selected.

In his burst of temper, the story told here to-day has it, the President immediately cast about for some means of retaliation against those who had defied his wishes. Unable to find any immediate punishment for New or Scott, he got back at Brooker through the suit.

TELLS LAWYERS WHAT THEY MAY OR MAY NOT DO

Bar Association Drafts New Canon of Ethics For the Profession.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Members of a committee of the American Bar Association, of which Judge Alton B. Parker is chairman, have made public a draft for the proposed canon of ethics for lawyers, on which the committee has completed work after a three days' session in Washington.

The final report will be submitted to the entire bar association at its annual session in August, at Seattle.

Under the new canon this is what a lawyer may do:

May defend a person of crime although he knows him to be guilty.

Publication or ordinary business cards is not per se improper. May refuse retainers. He is not obliged to act for any person who may wish to become his client.

Must observe the statute law, though before it is interpreted by adjudication he is free to advise as to its validity.

Must exact of clients strictest compliance with moral law.

Must accept compensation only from client, or with his knowledge and approval.

What he may not do:

The canon does not permit violation of law or any manner of fraud.

Solicitation of business by advertisements in unprofessional form.

May not offer professional advice to persons who have not sought it.

Should not render services involving disloyalty to the law or disrespect to judicial office.

Improper speech to adverse witnesses and suitors is inexcusable.

May not employ agents nor pay those who bring him clients.

MYOPIA CLUB DOGS SHOT IN FEAR OF RABIES

Whole Pack of 78 Fine Hounds Sacrificed When Scourge Appeared.

The entire pack of the Myopia Hunt Club's famous foxhounds have been shot because it was suspected that they were infected with rabies. They were fifty-two dogs and twenty-six puppies—the very finest of their sort in the land. In values they ranged from $25 up, totalling in the neighborhood of $2,500.

The pack was bred from dogs imported from England. For years they have led the Myopia hunters over Essex County hill and dale.

When two or three of the dogs grew sick recently the symptoms shown disquieted the trainers. When one of the dogs died his head was packed in ice and shipped to Dr. Langdon Frothingham, insurance in barteiology at the Harvard Medical School. His diagnosis showed rabies to be the cause of death.

The same symptoms which had manifested themselves in the case of the dog which died were observed in four others of the pack. After consultation the committee felt that a death verdict was the only absolutely safe solution.

Only a few of the dogs were affected, apparently, but this drastic action was taken rather than endanger any human life.

Yesterday afternoon was the time appointed, and the unsuspecting hounds were led out one by one and shot.

Another pack will be established as soon as possible. The new hounds will also be imported from England.

REVEAL SECRET OF WRIGHT BROTHERS' AEROPLANE

CONSTRUCTION OF WONDERFUL FLYING MACHINE THAT SURPRISED THE WORLD.

NEW YORK, May 29.—How the Wright brothers constructed their wonderful aeroplane, how they operated and steered it in the tests which have surprised the world was explained to-day. Heretofore the inventors have been successful in keeping secret every detail of the construction of their machine.

According to the explanation, the flying machine is composed of two thin aeroplanes superposed.

While these planes remain always parallel, they may be curved by the action of the operator so that the twin surfaces change their angle to the wind.

The planes are a structure of strong wood or metal, covered in linen, and move in the direction of their broader side. The two planes are separated by uprights or stanchions which are rigid from one end to the other. At the front of the machine are outstanding curves which, with the stanchions, hold the front part of the machine perfectly rigid.

The front of the wings is to be held unchanged at all times.

The desired flexibility of the wings is confined to the rear, where it is controlled by a very ingenious mechanism.

The rear ends of the machine are free and aft wires which keep rigid the whole of the centre of the structure.

But between the stanchions, which separate the wings at the rear, there are no stiffening wires, and none extends fore and aft at the extremities of the wings.

These extremities (or wings) are flexible at the rear, and the structure is articulated at the limits of the rigid central part.

The parts of the frames extending beyond this central part form a planal frame work, and are held in any desired position by wire running from the upper end of the rear stanchions at the extremities of the wings through guides or pulleys near the centre fixed to the lower wing or plane.

The wire communicates simultaneously a spiral twist to the wings of the two planes, presenting variable angles of incidence to the air, the side presenting the greater angle of incidence being obliged to the under the greater pressure resulting from the action of the air on this part, whereas the side offering the smaller angle of incidence fails.

The action permits the navigator, by regulating the angles of incidence, to maintain the lateral equilibrium of the machine, but this action tends to make the machine turn around a vertical axis.

To counteract this effect a vertical rudder is placed at the rear of the machine, movable by a wire cable permitting the rudder to exert a pressure on the side of the machine on which the wing offers the smaller angle of incidence to the air.

The movement can be produced only by a combination of forces acting in two directions.

The inertia of the machine may be one of those forces and the pressure on the vertical rudder placed behind the centre of the machine may be the other.

In the construction of the machine, the inertia of the machine is combined with the forces produced by the pressure of the wind on additional vertical surfaces, consisting of a rudder placed in front of the centre of the machine and of a fixed surface, preferably situated in front of the centre of gravity of the machine.

HUB LAWYER ARRESTED IN PERJURY CASE

Attorney Frank Wright Accused of Subornation in Worcester.

WORCESTER, May 28.—Frank C. Wright, a Boston lawyer, faces a charge of subornation of perjury, upon which he was arrested yesterday by order of Judge F. A. Gaskill of the Superior Criminal Court. Bail was fixed at $2,000.

The arrest is the result of the secret indictments brought by the Grand Jury against Mary A. Balch and Harry E. Murphy of Ludlow, Vt., and Nellie M. Dunn, who were before Judge Gaskill on the charge of perjury in connection with the divorce suit brought in 1906 by Mary A. Balch against her husband, Burton A. Balch, also of Ludlow, Vt. Mrs. Balch, Murphy and Mrs. Decker are alleged to have given false testimony on behalf of Mrs. Balch in her divorce suit.

Murphy was sentenced to the House of Correction for one year, and Mrs. Decker to the women's prison at Sherborn. The case against Mrs. Balch was continued, although she pleaded guilty. She is an important witness in civil suits against her father and mother in the Vermont courts, and the Vermont laws would prevent her from testifying after sentence had been passed on the charge of perjury.

Mrs. Balch to-day testified that she lived in Ludlow, and in seeking a divorce from her husband retained Frank C. Wright of Boston to prosecute her libel in the Superior Court in Worcester, in May, 1906. Wright, Mrs. Balch said, suggested to her that she get some one to tell a story of having seen her husband with another woman in a hotel in Middlebury, Vt., and it was agreed that Murphy should tell the story.

Murphy in court testified that he told the story in court and it was not true. Murphy told the Court that Wright told him in his office in Boston that there were 200 divorce cases in which the truth was ever told.

The case appounded horde, when convinced there was "nothing doing" in the banquet line, departed vowing vengeance, with sundry remarks that the coming campaign would show something to the Central Outing Club lunch.

FAKE TICKETS SPOIL OUTING CLUB'S PICNIC

Unprincipled Jokers Invite 300 Guests to Exclusive Banquet.

Special to the Boston American.

MANCHESTER, N. H., May 29.—Who sent 300 "fake" invitations to the Spring opening and banquet of the Central Outing Club, which the twenty-one club members had arranged for themselves alone?

The "fake" invitations broke up the banquet. They made the Central Outing Club members hopping mad. They brought the wrath of several score of would-be diners down on the heads of the Central Outing Club and the guilty counterfeiters alike. And the whole mix-up threatens to disrupt present political plans in the Eighteenth Senatorial District on account of this multiple acrimony.

The Central Outing Club members are busy dodging explanations on the one hand and sleuthing for the guilty people on the other.

Rivals Laugh at Outing Crowd.

The Pinehurst Associates, a rival political organization, are laughing to split over the whole matter. The Pinehurst's camp adjoins the Central Outing Club's quarters on the shore of Lake Massabesic. At the very time when the Central Outing Club were trying to keep the holders of "fake" invitations from capturing the place the Pinehurst crowd took note of the cheerful grins from their own grounds. The Pinehurst quarters also had a brand new "sassy" sign saying "For Members Only" on the door. The Central Outing men are wondering if that was any particular significance in this sign.

The Central Outing Club is made up of city office holders and business men who, as one member expresses it, "like a good time and can afford it." John Shea is president, and his members include Aldermen, City Hall "pols" and other influential men to the number of twenty-one. To celebrate the opening of new quarters they planned this "private" dinner.

A few days before the opening the county was flooded with counterfeit tickets, each calling for "dinner," and inviting the recipient to be sure to be present. The recipients included men from Governor Floyd and Mayor Reed down to notorious "hungry ones" and political grafters. The Governor and Mayor and some others did not attend, but about two hundred officers did.

The grafters especially saved their appetites for the "dig feed."

Word of the "fake tickets" came to the club members an hour before the dinner time. They struck a Board of Health, diphtheria card on the clubhouse, barricaded all doors and windows and tried to stave off the onslaught of hungry banqueters. But the latter were from Missouri as well as New Hampshire and had "to be shown."

Couldn't See the Joke.

To make it worse, some of the "fake" ticket holders were political allies of the club men and didn't see it at all as a joke. Some of the club members sneaked out and pushed out on the table in the first row-boats they could impound, hoping to establish alibis.

The club appointed horde, when convinced there was "nothing doing" in the banquet line, departed vowing vengeance, with sundry remarks that the coming campaign would show something to the Central Outing Club lunch.

LYNN COUPLE AGED 60, WALK TO PORTLAND

PORTLAND, Me., May 29.—Few people at the age of sixty years would have the courage to attempt to walk from Boston to Portland, but this is just what Mr. and Mrs. William H. Morrison have done. They are not content with this 100-mile walk, however, but started to-day to walk to Bridgton, and after a stay there for a few days will start on a tramp through the White Mountains and back to West Lynn, Mass., where they have their home.

When it is taken into consideration that Mr. Morrison is sixty years of age and that his wife is only three years younger, the trip is all the more remarkable.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrison are taking this walk for pleasure and for Mr. Morrison's health. They are not carrying a tent, Boston's record and are enjoying the scenery and all the pleasures of pedestrianism when taking long walks. Mr. Morrison is the proprietor of a large periodical store in West Lynn and a few weeks ago he was advised by a physician to get more exercise in the open air. Upon the physician's advice, he and Mrs. Morrison began to walk daily. They walk ten and most every day would walk from twelve to twenty miles. They then decided on the Portland trip

SETS TRAP FOR HORSE THIEVES; CATCHES WIFE

TAUNTON, May 29.—Horse thieves have been bothering the farmers of Raynham and as Theodore A. Leonard, who runs a sawmill, set a trap to catch them. He left his buggy in an inviting position, with a horse nearby, and then unscrewed the nuts from the axles of the carriage. "They will get in the buggy and drive like thunderation. Then, when the wheels come off, there will be something doin'," he said.

The town constables were taken into the confidence of Farmer Leonard, and they followed that his was the best scheme for catching thieves yet proposed. Everything was in readiness for a midnight pursuit of the thieves when Mr. Leonard retired.

"Guess I'll go to meetin' at the church. There," said Mrs. Leonard next morning. "All right," said Theodore, as he harnessed the gray mare to the buggy. Mrs. Leonard climbed aboard and when the wheels came off she was thrown, sustaining severe injuries, and the gray mare kicked in the carriage before running away. Theodore Leonard followed his chief trap to find his wife and the remnants of his carriage were carried home. Mrs. Leonard is under a physician's care.

EXPLAIN VOTES ON LICENSE BILL

At the Dorchester municipal building on Columbia road, last evening, Representative William H. O'Brien and his colleague, Herbert S. Frost, told why they had helped to kill the local option measure in the Legislature this year.

Mr. O'Brien said that the reason he had voted against the measure was that Ward 14 had voted for three eight out of nine times, and he opposed the measure because he regarded that position as the true sentiment of the ward. The explanation of Mr. Frost was along the same lines.

Representative Howard Mildrun told of a visit to Governor Guild at the time when the latter promised that there should be no more licenses granted in Dorchester. Shortly after two more were granted, and when Mr. Mildrun went to see the Governor about it His Excellency asked him to call again, when the entire board would be present. At that meeting it was said told the exile board that if any more licenses were granted in Dorchester he would expect the resignation of the board at once.

MERCHANT 14 WEEKS IN JAIL FOR CONTEMPT

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 29.—Carroll H. Chapman, a member of the bankrupt dry goods firm of Young & Holland, is still a prisoner in the county jail to-day, where he has spent fourteen weeks for contempt of court because he answered questions at a hearing in a manner unsatisfactory to Judge Brown.

He had also failed to comply with the order of the Court to produce certain books which were missing. Yesterday Chapman came into court and offered through his counsel, F. W. Tillinghast, certain account books which he said had been lost and removed to him by an unknown in an effort to purge himself of contempt.

There were duplications and discrepancies in the books, which made the Court doubtful as to their genuineness. The judge also desired more information about one William Riedich, to whom Chapman said the business was sold, but the petitioner was unable to clear up the mystery and Judge Brown ordered him back to his cell.

"Mr. Chapman," asked the Court, "can you produce from any part of the United States any reputable witness who ever knew William Sheldon, or who ever knew of the existence of such a man?"

"I cannot think of anyone at this time," replied Chapman.

"You have had three months in which to think this matter over," said Judge Brown, "it would seem as though in that time you would have been able to recall some person who could help you at this time."

Chapman also submitted destroying certain memoranda.

He says that the last time he saw his fiancee was one week ago last Wednesday, when they practically completed arrangements to have the ceremony performed last night.

A few days later Mr. Gay called to see Mrs. Lockwood, but was much surprised when informed that she was not at home and that no one else of the household. Since that time no word has been heard from her.

Mr. Gay is about fifty years, clean shaven and about five feet eight inches tall. He is well known and respected in the district where he lives. Mrs. Lockwood, who, although married only a year ago to a John Lockwood of this city, is thirty years of age, and has been a widow for two years.

TO SWEEP SEAS IN PURSUIT OF OUTLAW SHIP

NEW YORK, May 29.—The National Manufacturers' Association was to-day added to the growing list of seekers after the ex-Clyde liner Goldsboro, which sailed out of this port twenty-six days ago after a long with the revenue officials.

Some of the members of the big association had shipments of freight on the Goldsboro when she slipped away, and they are worried about their money.

A. Parker Nevin, counsel for the association, says that some members are going to fit out a special steamer manned with marines, if possible, to capture the Goldsboro.

Not a word of the old liner has come from any of the Central American ports, for which she might have been heading. The British consul here and the United States Treasury officials expect to hear as soon as she reaches any port, for the Goldsboro has become an outlaw ship.

Just a day or two after she sailed she was a British vessel and had the right to fly the Union Jack. Then irregularities of a serious nature were found in the application on which her papers had been granted and her papers were revoked and notice was sent to the ports at which she was likely to call.

THE BLOOD SACRIFICE

"A good woman's sacrifice of an innocent girl's life to a drunken libertine, when he is the good woman's son or brother, is the cruelest thing on earth."

By DOROTHY DIX

"WHY is it," asked a man the other day, "that a woman who is good, virtuous, religious and conscientious will not hesitate to sacrifice an innocent and ignorant young girl's happiness and life to a drunken libertine, if the latter happens to be the good woman's son or brother?

"It is the cruelest thing on earth. It is the offering up of a human life as a burnt sacrifice as a scapegoat for the man's sins. If the woman even imagines that it will help the man, and the man is anyone of whom she is fond.

Mask for Sins of Her Son

"Let me tell you of a case that I know. A handsome, well educated, well bred young fellow met a girl in my city and made love to her. She was innocent and ignorant, and he married her. He lived in another city, at some distance away from the girl's home, but the girl's father made inquiries of business acquaintances concerning the young man, and got back the usual unrankful replies—that he was one of the good things that people like to say under such circumstances, and the withholding of the bad things that they ought to tell.

In short, the letters said that the young man belonged to a prominent family, was well off, etc., and that the girl not only knew that he was a drunkard and a rone, and had a past that the father would not have let his lovely young daughter come in telephoning distance of if he had known it.

"Well, as soon as the engagement was announced the young man's mother invited the girl to visit her. The older woman received the young one with open arms. She did everything on earth to help the match along.

"She covered up everything that could possibly have awakened the girl's suspicion. She never breathed one word of the things that in common honesty, in common fairness, in common decency and humanity she should have told that poor child.

"She even hustled her son out of sight, and spoke of his 'poor nerves' one time when, as the girl knew afterwards, he had come home drunk.

Treated Her Like a Brute

"The girl married the man, and he treated her like a brute, as his mother must have known he would. He broke his wife's heart, as he had broken his mother's before; and when the wife acked the mother with tears why she and not warned her, the mother's only reply was, 'Jack was wild, and I thought that perhaps marriage would steady him.'

"That," continued the man, "is merely a sample of what happens every day, and of the cold-blooded way in which a woman will sacrifice another woman for the fun cied good of her son or brother. How can she do it? How can any woman with a heart in place of a piece of ice in her bosom be so fiendishly cruel?

"When it comes to love," I answered, "the average woman is a tigress. She cares for nothing on earth but her own, and she would sacrifice anybody or anything to her beloved. She is absolutely selfish. She cannot see that any one else has any rights where her own are concerned.

"If her drinking brute of a son wants the purest and fairest girl in the community she would give her to him if she could. Just as she would give him the reddest apple or the softest seat.

"If she has tried everything else to reform him without avail, she has no qualms in sacrificing a young maiden before him, because to her the end justifies the means.

"To her it seems more important that Jack should be kept straight, even for six months, than that poor little Mary Smith should have her happiness saved from ruin.

Thinks Son Too Good

"There is also this other excuse for the mother, that she invariably thinks that her son, no matter how worthless and dissolute he is, is too good for the best woman alive.

"Suppose Jack does come home raving drunk now and then; suppose he does abuse his wife when sober; suppose there is that black episode in his past; suppose his wife does have to support him?

"Good heavens! What does the woman want? Doesn't she have him all the leisure of the time? Hasn't she the privilege of gazing upon him even if he won't work? One who marries a godling ought to be willing to pay the price.

"That is the mother's attitude, for it must not be forgotten that, with all his faults their upon him, she sees her son superior to all the balance of the world.

"Then, too—and this I think is one of the main reasons that mothers and sisters so seldom speak out and tell the girl the truth about the dissipated men she is about to marry—ninety-nine times out of a hundred the girl will not listen.

"It's no use to tell her that Jack drinks, because she fancies herself a Keeley cure, and Jack has told her that if she marries him he will never even care to look at a highball again.

Girls Can't Be Taught

"It's no use to tell her that Jack has a wandering fancy, and that he has loved a hundred women, and kissed and ridden away; because the girl is so enamored of her own charms that she believes that she could hold any one.

"It's no good to raise the curtain on a man's dark past, because—poor, pitiful simpleton that she is—she says that she has nothing to do with that, and she is too ignorant to know that a man's past lays a mortgage on his future that he never finishes paying in this world—a mortgage that his wife must help him pay, and his children and his children's children continue to pay after he is dead. That's one reason the woman who knows doesn't speak.

"Perhaps so," replied the man, "but if man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn, woman's silence to woman breaks the hearts of half the women in the world."

The Flagship of the Fleet

By the Chaplain of the Battleship Connecticut

The spirit of patriotic rivalry among the men behind the guns of Uncle Sam's navy is embodied in the following verses, composed by the Catholic priest attached to the battleship Connecticut, and sent to the BOSTON AMERICAN by one of its readers, who received them in a letter from a former shipmate since the great battleship fleet started on its cruise to the Pacific Coast:

I.

(Air:—"Tommy Atkins.")

We are sailor lads that serve our Uncle Sammy,
And guard his flag upon the ocean brine.
We're the finest aggregation
That any living nation
E'er flung upon the sea to fighting line.
We're for the call of duty always ready;
We never question why we're sent or where.
On any course or bearing
Our warships may be faring,
You'll find your Uncle Sammy's "bullies" there.

CHORUS.

Then it's shipmates, get together,
With a heart and with a hand;
For the credit of the navy
And the honor of the land.
We are proud to serve the nation,
That any living nation
We are Uncle Sammy's sailors,
Ever loyal, brave and true.

II.

We have fifteen husky battleships behind us,
The pride and might of our Atlantic fleet.
With the old man, grim and solemn,
Keeping tabs upon the revenue,
And looking's if he'd rather fight than eat.
How fine they are, their broadside guns all gleaming,
As with the leaving sea they rise and fall;
But the really fancy "stunner"
Is our sixteen thousand tonner,
Oh! the flagship is the queen among them all.

CHORUS.

Then it's shipmates, get together,
With a heart and with a hand,
For the credit of the navy
And the honor of the land.
We are proud to serve the Nation,
It's a life that's wild and jovial,
And promises to settle
On the flagship of the fleet.

III.

When the Admiral reluctantly decided
To change his pennant home "for coin of science sake,"
The service all chatted
There was no ship better rated
Than this to show his fleet a proper wake.
And when he came aboard as looked us over
From keel to fighting top all spick and span,
Sez he to Mr. Train, "We'll soon forget the Maine
I've a ship at last to sail a sailor man."

CHORUS.

Then it's shipmates, get together,
With a heart and with a hand;
For the credit of the navy
And the honor of the land.
We may yet have lots to do,
An' bless ye, Bobby Evans,
May we yet be under you.

IV.

When the ships go out for record targets practice
And every crew is keen to do its best,
You will find our flagship in it,
With more hits per gun per minute,
Than any other two of all the rest.
We'll back our broadsides both against the Kansas
We'll show the "dude" Vermont a little trick,
While the prim Louisiana will look like a lame ganna,
And the Minnesota will look every bit as sick.

CHORUS.

Then it's shipmates, get together,
With a heart and with a hand;
For the credit of the navy
And the honor of the land.
We are proud to serve the nation,
We are Uncle Sammy's sailors
Ever loyal, brave and true.

FAIRY places that you turn into, with their wonder-exciting doorways into Wonderland, when you turn up your eyes to the arching and lights above, have a white pavement to step shouting at you to "hold your hat." Always that—"hang on to your hats, Angel faces!"

And that's the thing you do, from when you hike through the gates, longing out your neck to see over the Billy that loiters in front of you, till you drift out again, giddy-headed with the color and fun that have changed and shifted and turned Betty in an endless pattern before your eyes for hours.

When it came time for the drifting-out time for me, my arm ached fearlessly with gripping my rough brimmed "chapeau," and my face ached, too, with laughing, and wouldn't go back into the way it looks most times, but kept laughing all by itself, with a little numb place under each cheekbone.

Oh! ho! But fun! I had never been before; and there isn't any Wonderland out West. So you see!

It might be an Elfin City—white-streeted, fantastic and dreamlike, with the slender, fairy structure of palace and tower and minaret, builded lower on tower of white, starred thick with yellow points of light.

The tower structure rises white and bright out of the street, clean as a windswept shore that lays bare its rock under the sand.

It lifts up into the mist; and as your eyes follow the white and the edges and the lines of it, it slips into the mist as that all form and shape fall away, leaving the thousands of lights untelly winking there, like stars strung on threads into a pattern like the skeleton framework of an edifice.

It's a Faery Burg, where you go and drop your little coin at the gateway and do fantastic things for four hours that go like the snap of your fingers, and you go home and dream all the young hours of flying to the moon on your own gray-feath ered wings, and tobogganing back to the earth again.

It is a carnival of wild flights and laughter. You rest gayly from one mysterious doorway to another, gayer and more wonderful than the other, and that too, swallows you up till you come out again into the white street, wild-haired and desperately feeling for hatpins, your gay little hat over one ear and a red stain on each cheekbone, and your belly quaking with laughter, his hat in his fist and the other smoothing his hair.

Your hands are sticky with sweetmeats, candy, pulpous and "hot dogs," and marshmallows that leave white dust on your fingers and the tip of your nose.

You take the roaring, leering curves that sweep you against the side of the car, and you drop swiftly down the gasping dips where Hades flies by and emerald-eyed dragons turn their jaws to you, and you fly blindly through dark, damp places where the bashfullest Billy in the world grows old enough to hold his Betty's hand.

And when you climb out and get your breath, and your hat on, you wish you might go again!

You go down the chutes into the water, with the sound and the speed of sword on sword. You fall into the clutches of a scarlet-garbed Satan, who forces him to get your fortune told. You follow a spirit through the Inferno, where sassy skeletons perch on the rocks and vines, and jeer things at you as you stumble by.

And I stood the skeletons beautifully, but at the end, when I tagged along a bit at the tail of the crowd, a bleached skull flew out at me and hooted one hollow "Boo!" at me, and I picked up my skirts and fled; and I couldn't tell which was my "Yow!" and which was the skull's.

You go away, oh, Angel face; so weary with laughter and dizzy with the changing fun, like the mind you had when you were a little Kiddie and glued your eye to the small glass of a kaleidoscope and watched the colored bits of glass slip and change in the sun.

Funny? Say, it didn't look for it. I think, but all the Billys and Bettys that go gayly through all the fun of this Wonderland will need Billys and Bettys—what we say—"good clues."

The Typical Wonderland Betty and Billy. They're Well Bred

He Knew Good Singing

And He Appreciated It Immensely, Because—

BY KENNETT HARRIS

"MY dear," said Bolsover, as he entered the parlor with his little, fat, black-mustached man, "I want to present Mr. Starpen. Mr. Starpen wants to hear Margaretta sing, and I've promised him that he shall. Margie, this is Mr. Starpen. My daughter Margaretta, Mr. Starpen."

Mrs. Bolsover, stout and good-natured, graciously put three more creases in her chin in acknowledgement of the introduction. Miss Margaretta inclined her red head and showed the remarkably good teeth in her wide mouth. The guest bowed until his expansive shirt bosom popped.

"I can assure you that I shall appreciate the privilege," he said. "Music has always been my great passion, and particularly vocal music. I have been looking forward to this opportunity for years."

"Well, her father and I and our friends certainly do enjoy Margaretta's music," said Mrs. Bolsover, complacently. "We may not be very good judges, perhaps."

"I guess we've heard a few of the operatic songs in our time, all the same," said Bolsover. "Margie, sing something for us, like a good girl."

"Oh, pa!" protested Margaretta. "I can't sing this evening. I'm so hoarse I can hardly speak. I know that I couldn't sing a note."

"Nonsense," said Bolsover.

"Do try, darling," begged her mother. "I'm sure that Miss Bolsover won't be so cruel as to disappoint me," said Starpen. "I would be insufferable. Please!"

"Oh, well, I'll try, then," said the young woman.

Cultivated Talent

She seated herself at the piano and began to turn some pages of music. Starpen rested himself in an attitude of breathless expectancy, which Bolsover disturbed by informing him $3,000 up to date for his last year and which we don't begrudge it, either," he said. "You'll see."

"I'm quite sure that you will never have any reason to," said Starpen. "I think that our children have a talent it's our duty to cultivate it. I'd give any amount you could mention if my daughters had any voice, but they haven't. It's one of the sorrows of my life."

"I don't see anything here," said Margaretta, wheeling around on her stool. "Is there any song that you would like, Mr. Starpen?"

"Why—er—er—anything. Miss Bolsover," said Starpen. "I'm sure that anything will be lovely. Just whatever you choose."

"But I'd like you to suggest something," persisted the young woman. "Tell me what you want me to sing."

"Sing what you will," said Bolsover, proudly.

Starpen asked for "Oh, Promise Me." Miss Bolsover began to sing it and he rolled his eyes to the ceiling in ecstasy at the opening bars, whispered a soft "Ah-h-h!" of delight. Bolsover looked over at Mrs. Bolsover and nodded. Mrs. Bolsover nodded and smiled in return.

"Magnificent!" exclaimed Starpen, enthusiastically, when the song was finished. "My gracious, what a voice! Wonderful! I never heard anything like it." Mr. Bolsover, if your daughter could be heard in public the town would go crazy over her. I expected to hear something fine, but I never dreamed of a trait like that."

"You're just saying that," said Margaretta, blushing a little nevertheless as she rose from the piano.

"Don't Mean It"

"Oh, please!" entreated Starpen, rising to detain her. "Don't stop. If you only knew how I enjoy singing like that! I don't know when I ever listened to anything that gave me as much pleasure. I only wish that my wife was here. She's almost as fond of music as I am."

"Oh, I know that you don't mean it," said the girl.

"Mrs. Bolsover, Mr. Bolsover, won't you please persuade your daughter to favor me again? Positively, I'm going to insist. I'm going to make a deputation and refuse to leave the house when requested if I don't hear more. Could you sing—do you know 'The Holy City,' Miss Bolsover? Would you be so good?"

"Sing it!" commanded Bolsover.

"Yes, do dear," Mrs. Bolsover urged. "I'm glad you mentioned that one," she added, beaming on Starpen, "for I do think 'The Holy City' and Margaretta sings it beautifully, every one says so."

"I just had a fear—I had a sort of feeling that she must," said Starpen.

Margaretta sang "The Holy City" and Starpen's raptures were almost, but not quite, too great for speech. Later she sang, at his entreaty, "Dearie" and "Love Me and the World Is Mine." She sang others. In fact, she sang so many that by the time the evening drew to a close her pile of hurraenes was no mere excuse.

Starpen tore himself away with extreme reluctance. "Mr. Bolsover," he said, to his host in the hall, "I want to repeat my thanks for one of the most delightful evenings that it has ever been my good fortune to pass. You are certainly to be congratulated on the marvelous talent that your daughter possesses. Talk about Mary Garden, too.

"I'm glad you enjoyed it," said Bolsover. "I think myself she's a little out of the usual. Glad to see you at any time, and hope that you will be glad to see me. I hope you'll come often."

"I feel that I have to beg a dog to keep me away," said Starpen. "Well, good-night. I'll see you at lunch to-morrow, then?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Bolsover, a little later. "I think he's very nice, to me, too. You can see how much he enjoys singing when he hears it. But who is he? I never heard anything of him before."

"Why, he's a sort of promoter, I believe," replied Bolsover. "He's got some sort of scheme for extracting turpentine from pine needles, and I fancy I'll put a little money into it. Yes, I happened to mention that Margaretta sang and he was interested that I invited him to come home with me."

NEW POTATOES

IF new potatoes are put into cold water for ten or fifteen minutes, they can be scraped with a case knife. Boil them in salted water until soft, and then drain. Have on the stove a very hot frying pan; into this put two tablespoons of beef dripping or butter and cook in it an onion in very fine pieces. Fry a rich golden brown and pour this over the potatoes. You will find this gives the potatoes a delicious flavor.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BETTER KEEP ON WORKING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company for the last four years with a young man whom I love, and who claims he loves me. He has a fine position and is doing well, but wants me to give up my position at present. He makes $25 a week and I earn $12 a week and give part of it home. My friends claim that I ought to prepare myself before getting married by learning how to cook, and stay home and do housework for my mother until I learn everything. My parents will not hear of this plan, as they are not rich and really need my assistance as long as I remain at home. They don't know two months is sufficient to stay at home before getting married. He answers that if my parents cannot keep me at home he can afford to pay me as much as I earn. I claim that it is wrong to accept money from any man unless married to him. He says he is over-conscientious, and that if I do not marry him at once all is over between us. He is steady and would give me a nice home, and says he loves me. I would hate to lose him, but I think it would hurt me very much to give him up.

I THINK perhaps that you can persuade him to look at matters in the right light. You are quite right. It would not do at all for you to accept money from him before you are married to him. Tell him that your parents need the money, and that as long as you are at home you feel that you must pay your share of the expenses. Two months, or even one month, will be quite long enough for you to learn all about cooking, etc.

ANGRY CLASH IN SENATE ON MERGER BILL

Mahoney Takes Offence at Linehan's Attack on the Railroad Committee.

Senator Linehan of South Boston and Senator Daniel D. Mahoney of Holyoke clashed in the Senate chamber to-day in debate over the merger bill, and the former told the only Democrat on the Rail road Committee that he would "get all that is coming to you before the debate on this bill is over."

The Senate voted this afternoon to postpone debate on the merger bill until Monday next. Although Senators Linehan, Frye boys and Mitchell fought for longer time for consideration of the measure by the Boston Chamber of Commerce, organized labor and other bodies, the Republican members would not consent to a postponement until Tuesday, because they want to attend the love feast arranged for next Gloucester by Speaker John M. Cole on that day.

In the debate on the proposal to postpone Senator Linehan said to members of the Railroad Committee:

"You have reported a corporation bill. The corporations want it rushed right through the House. Go ahead—rush it through and continue to do everything the corporations want, as you have been doing."

Senator Mahoney, who signed the bill as a member of the Railroad Committee, arose and asked Mr. Linehan:

"Do you wish to insinuate that I am under the thumb of the corporations?"

"I am too charitable to answer that question point blank," replied Senator Linehan. "But here is the bill," and he held up a copy of the measure as he spoke, "it is a corporation bill," he added.

"I don't want any charity," cried Senator Mahoney. "If the Senator from Suffolk has anything to say about me he can go ahead."

"I will go ahead," retorted Senator Linehan, "and the Holyoke Senator will get all that's coming to him before the debate on this bill is over."

HORRORS! FIERCE HELLO BUG BITES FAIR TELEPHONE GIRLS IN THE NECK!

Have You Seen the "Hello Bug"?

Four inches long.
Six legs.
Weighs nine ounces—about twice the weight of a league baseball.
Looks like a small turtle.
Wings measure six inches from tip to tip.
Frequents telephone offices.

HE STRIKES WITH BULLET-LIKE VELOCITY

HIS TERRIBLE FINISH

The "Linelonesy Callagahanbus," or commonly known as the "Hello bug," has arrived and every Boston telephone girl is shaking in her Number Twos for fear she will be bitten.

The first "Hello bug" of the season made its appearance in the Spencer Telephone Exchange and nearly put that office out of commission before it was killed.

Dispatches from Spencer, recounting the advent of the bug, say that it came into the office, presumably to telephone, and that John Prouty, the operator, and Ward Howland and Ralph Rolland, two Spencerites, had a frenzied pursuit for his bugship. Before the bug was exterminated it bit Howland savagely on the neck. The bite raised a blotch on the fair Howland epidermis which required the attention of a doctor.

Looks Like Mud Turtle.

The Hello bug is built on the general lines of a mud turtle, more for strength than beauty. He weighs nine ounces, which is nearly twice the weight of a baseball. Those who are acquainted with the monsentum of a pitched ball can figure the impact packed in a Hello bug banging into your neck when in full flight.

THE ARRIVAL OF THE CALLAGANABUS

The bug has wings that spread six inches from tip to tip. With these wings he gets up tremendous speed. When his nine-ounce body, propelled by these powerful wings, is projected through space and the whole mud turtle effect strikes a human being the result is nearly always fatal. In addition, the bug is a savage biter.

The Hello bug is indigenous to telephone communities. It frequents telephone exchanges, preferably to listen on the wire. When people come in to phone and the buzz disturb him he wags angrily and shaking fiercely at the intruder, flies toward him or her at lightning speed. First striking the victim with bullet-like velocity, the bug inflicts a deep wound with his scissors-shaped jaws. The combined attack leaves the victim here for combat and the bug flies away with a buzzing sound like a screaming loon.

Terror of Exchange Girls.

The Hello bug is the particular terror of telephone girls. A Hello girl who is not afraid of the most profane subscriber and who laughs gally at threats of "I'll report you to the manager" will quail before the Hello bug.

The bug is particularly partial to plump, full-blooded Hello girls and likes to bite them just where the low-necks at the nape of the neck ending to the top of the long ovular.

If you are calling "Central" and hear the girl suddenly emit a terrified shriek, you may be sure the probability has just been bitten by a Hello bug.

MARTYRS SELF TO AID SCIENCE CURE DISEASE

Wanderer Submits to Innoculation With Tuberculosis Which Kills Wife and Son.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Willing to die to aid the cause of science in discovering a cure for the dread white plague, which killed his wife and a promising son, Frank Merritt has permitted a physician to inject in his system with the germs of tuberculosis. An examination made to-day showed that already the disease has made considerable progress.

Merritt, who is a middle-aged man, was at one time a prosperous bookbinder in a Western State. The death of his wife and son stripped on his ambition to extend that he finally failed in business and became a wanderer. Two weeks ago he appealed to the Salvation Army headquarters in this city for lodging.

It was there he announced his willingness to die if his death might aid at any way in combating the spread of tuberculosis.

Dr. L. Carroll Cole, 2,102 Broadway found Merritt, and last Thursday inoculated the man with the germ of tuberculosis. A statement from the science office to-day says the disease has now thoroughly entered into Merritt's system.

"My action was voluntary," said Merritt, and I hope that as a result of the experiment a preventive and cure for tuberculosis may be found. I was a well man when I was inoculated last Thursday, but to-day the disease seems to have well developed. My condition will be watched from hour to hour, and at a certain stage of the disease I will be killed to make to cure me, and the doctor seems to be pretty sure that he can do so. Of course, I am not anxious to die, but I feel like doing something to aid in the interest of humanity and science."

PROBE MYSTERY IN FIRE CHIEF'S ATTEMPT TO DIE

Head of Everett Department Gashes Throat With Razor; May Not Recover.

Chief Fletcher A. Sutherland, of the Everett Fire Department, who, it is believed, attempted suicide by cutting his own throat, lies to-day in a critical condition in the Malden City Hospital. His physicians think that he has even chances for his life.

The police of Malden are making an investigation to learn how Sutherland's throat was cut and what, if he did it himself, were the reasons. Sergeant Johnson has been unable to find the razor or knife with which the chief's throat was cut. An empty razor case was found in his pocket, but the wounds on his neck are ragged and unlike those which would be made by a sharp razor.

Mystery surrounds the case and the authorities are not helped greatly by Sutherland, who is unable to speak. He was found last night by Station Master Bert Lawis of Malden when the train stopped into the Broadway station and fell fainting on the floor. The police ambulance was called and Sutherland was hurried to the hospital in Malden, where he was identified by letters and keys found in his pockets.

At the hospital, where it was found that his throat had been cut in three places, Officer Lewis, when he saw the man return to consciousness, asked:

"Were you alone when this thing happened?"

The chief nodded feebly, as though giving assent.

"Did you do it yourself?" was asked. And it is said the same affirmative reply was made. As a result of this, the authorities are inclined to think that he may have slashed himself, although one of his pockets was found turned inside out, suggesting robbery.

Fire Commissioner Wilbert Ferguson was asked last night if he could give any reason why Chief Sutherland should commit suicide. He said that he thought he had been working very hard and had become worried. He added that he talked with Mr. Sutherland three days ago and noticed that he was looking unwell.

Chief Sutherland is married and has a daughter, Bessie, and a son, Edward, who live at No. 377 Broadway, near the fire station.

150 SLAIN AT SAMOS; SEND FOR WARSHIPS

Turkish Troops Guard Island Rulers—Garrison Face Starvation.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 29.—Consular dispatches from Samos late to-day say fully one hundred and fifty persons have been killed in the fighting at Vathy, the capital, and that hostilities, already of four days' duration, are still raging.

Kopassis Effendi, the Turkish representative and actual ruler of the island, has taken refuge with the nominal governor, the Prince of Samos, and the small Turkish garrison is defending them. They are killing the islanders like sheep, but lack provisions and are in desperate straits.

The consulates are crowded with refugees, and many of the consuls have asked for warships.

Hundreds of refugees have made their way to Athens.

The consuls at Samos, who are mostly native Greeks, have requested the powers to send in warships.

The Turkish government is arranging to send in large reinforcements of troops from the naval division to succor the rebellious islanders, who have the support of the local gendarmerie.

The presence of Turkish troops is accounted for by the fact that, while Samos is an autonomous principality, it pays an annual tribute to Turkey, and the Prince of Samos is nominated by the Sultan and is a Greek. The population of 50,000 is composed mostly of Greeks.

NOTED SOCIETY WOMAN SUICIDE AT PORTLAND

PORTLAND, Me., May 29.—Mrs. Harriet Bell Stevens, one of Portland's best-known and most beautiful society women and an authoress of some note, committed suicide in the dining room of her beautiful home on Neal street this morning by shooting herself through the head with a bullet from a thirty-eight calibre revolver. It is supposed that the shooting was done in a moment of temporary insanity.

When her husband came into the room for his breakfast he found her dying on the floor. Dr. Frederick Gerrish was immediately called, but the woman was beyond human aid. Mrs. Stevens was before her marriage Miss Harriet Bell, daughter of a prominent Wilmington, Del., family and was well up in the literary world and interested in prison reform and charity work.

She leaves three little girls, Esther, Jean Lee and Virginia, besides her husband, S. Augustus Stevens of the A. A. Stevens Manufacturing Company.

CANON APPEAL MAY BE REFUSED

NEW YORK, May 29.—Canon William Sheafe Chase, rector of Christ's Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, who was recently reprimanded for contempt of court, may not be permitted to appeal to the Court of Appeals from the finding of Justice Marean of Brooklyn, who reprimanded the canon.

Arguments were heard in the case in Brooklyn on a motion by Assistant District Attorney Elder to dismiss the canon's writ calling for a review of his case. Mr. Elder declared that inasmuch as no sentence was imposed upon Canon Chase there was no reason for an appeal. Justice Kelly said he would consider the papers before rendering a decision.

Canon Chase was found guilty of criticising the action of Justice Marean in an article on the canon and other Brooklyn pastors to close a moving picture show Sunday.

SUED FOR KISSING BELLE, DOCTOR CHARGES PLOT

JURY AT LOWELL TO-DAY DECIDES IF MRS. PRINCE WAS DAMAGED TO AMOUNT OF $5,000.

LOWELL, May 29.—The jury in the case brought by Mrs. Nellie S. Prince, a dashing beauty of Tewksbury, against Dr. Franklin Temple for $5,000 damages, alleging that the physician kissed her on the afternoon of November 14, 1907, while he was examining her in his office for heart trouble, has all the testimony in the suit and this afternoon retired to find a verdict.

The case was resumed to-day before Judge King in the Middlesex County Superior Court before a crowded courtroom. Mrs. Prince looked very pretty in a black tailor-made gown of black.

She had told the jury that on the afternoon in question she and Dr. Temple were in his private office and that the doctor was listening to her heart beating. She declared that he asked her if she didn't love him and that then he kissed her.

Dr. Temple denied all of this and declared it was a case of attempted blackmail.

Doctor's Partner Testifies.

Dr. Fred Dugdale, partner of Dr. Temple, testified to seeing Mrs. Prince come to Dr. Temple's office on different occasions. He said:

"On Saturday afternoon following the alleged attack she came to our offices with another woman. Mrs. Prince went into Dr. Temple's private office alone and closed the door. I heard her demand money from him, and the doctor opened the door and told her to get out or he would throw her out.

"As she went out she told the doctor she would bring her husband down to see him. He told her all right, and that they would both be taken care of."

Dr. Temple was recalled just before the close of the case. Mrs. Carfrouth, Mrs. Prince's closest friend, was recalled. She said that she, Mrs. Dr. Dugdale at the post office, and that he had called her up to go to Temple's office alone, and for her to tell Mrs. Prince to go alone, too.

Then Judge King charged the jury, and the twelve men retired.

Formerly Lived in Hub.

Dr. Temple formerly lived in Boston. He has been in Lowell several years and is known in other places throughout Massachusetts and Connecticut. Mrs. Prince, on the witness stand, said that in the early last Fall she had trouble with her heart, and fearing it might develop seriously decided to consult a physician.

She sought Dr. Temple. She visited his office several times, accompanied sometimes by Mrs. Charlesjan, a friend and neighbor of hers. On the day before the alleged kissing, Mrs. Prince said, Mrs. Charlesjan told her when the doctor stepped from his private office and said he could not give her an examination that afternoon.

"He told me to return the following Tuesday, in the afternoon," said Mrs. Prince. "Mrs. Charlesjan was present," he said: 'And you come on Wednesday.'"

Mrs. Prince testified that she kept the appointment, and that she went to Dr. Temple's alone.

"I was in the private office," Mrs. Prince testified, "and while the doctor was bending over me, listening for heart beats, he placed his arm around my waist and said my heart was all right. He was listening for heart beats. He asked me if I couldn't love him a little, and before I could reply he kissed me."

Mrs. Prince said she returned with her sister next day to demand an apology from the doctor. Instead of getting it, she was put out. She denied that she asked the doctor for money.

"Was this kiss you told about an ordinary kiss or a soul kiss?" asked D. J. Donahue, the attorney representing Dr. Temple. The jurymen smiled.

Judge King ruled that question to go on the records' asked Judge King.

"Not necessarily," replied Mr. Donahue, "but I thought perhaps the witness might have been a member of the Mandamuse."

"Plot!" Declares Doctor.

Mrs. Prince's pretty black eyes flashed fire when Dr. Temple took the stand and sat facing her. The doctor denied that he had kissed the woman. Also he denied that he had placed his arm around her waist while examining her. He said he was not in love with her and never had been.

Dr. Temple was cross-examined by Deputy Sheriff Burgin, counsel for Mrs. Prince.

"When Mrs. Prince came back the second time," asked the attorney, "did she say she wanted a seashin sacquine or an automobile. She said she would call on you for money. I shall sell my husband that you have kissed me, and you do his I'll have you arrested for blackmail."

"What else did you say?" asked Mr. Murphy.

"I told her that her running mate was a drunkard and that she was a disgrace to her native land. I asked her what kind of a crowd I had struck. I told her to get out of my office."

"Threw It Right Out."

"You threw that right out, did you?"

"Just as fast as I could throw it out I let it go."

The woman you called Mrs. Prince's running mate' was a patient of yours, was she not?

"Yes."

"Did you know anything about her?"

"Nothing but that her husband told me."

The name of Dr. E. J. Livingstone has been mentioned in the case, although Dr. Livingstone has not been called as a witness.

Mrs. Prince was asked on the witness stand if she had not told Dr. Livingstone of the kissing bout by Dr. Temple. She said she had not.

Dr. Livingstone made the following public statement to-day:

"Mrs. Prince came to me suffering from nervousness and headache. I gave her a prescription, thinking perhaps her headache resulted from trouble with the eyes. Later Mrs. Prince came as an eye specialist, and she left my office. Later she returned and said she had been to Dr. Temple's, and that Dr. Temple had kissed her. I have not seen her since."

HALTS PARAGON PARK FLAMES; IS NEAR DEATH

Heroic Engineer Saves Resort from Destruction at Risk of Life.

The heroism of Walter F. Brooking, chief engineer of Paragon Park, Nantasket, prevented that big amusement piece to-day from being a heap of ashes. Brooking is the Nantasket General Hospital, seriously burned as a result of his battle, single-handed, with the fire which he held in control until help came.

While the engineer was at work on the boilers to-day a hamper which he carried exploded. Blazing oil set fire to his clothing and he was forced to lay down in attention to his own danger. Brooking seized a fire hose with one hand, while he endeavored to beat out the flames on his oil soaked jumper with the other.

He knew that if the fire once spread through the engine room it would command with other buildings and soon the entire place up in smoke. Although his own clothing was ablaze he fought until he fell exhausted.

Nearby dance building had been extinguished when other employes arrived, but the engine room was in flames and burning. One fund had been so badly burned that a finger fell off.

Doctors were hurried to his assistance and he was placed on a train and taken to the hospital. So badly was the engineer burned the physicians fear that he cannot recover.

The damage to the park will not be above $200. It did not spread beyond the engine room in which it started.

ELECTRIC WEIGHERS FOR "SALADA" TEA

There are eleven electrical weighing and packing machines in the "Salada" Tea Company's Toronto warehouse. A single one of these machines that packs pound pack tins exclusively turned out last year considerably more than 1,000,000 pounds of "Salada." Besides the machine, therefore, packs sufficient tea to supply each family in Canada with one pound annually. The space it occupies is only six cubic feet.

FAST TRACK FOR BIG COLLEGE FIELD MEET

Special to the Boston American.

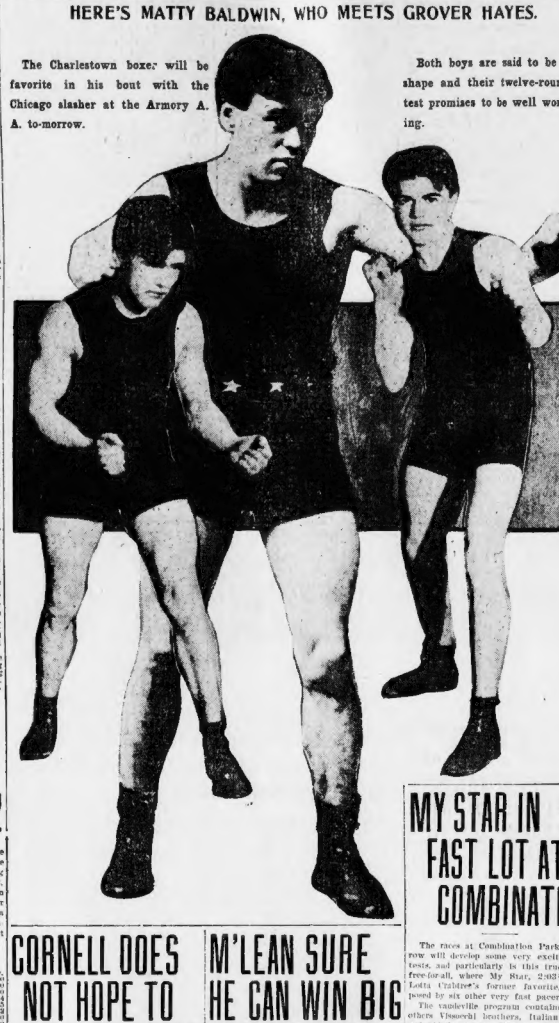
FRANKLIN FIELD, Philadelphia, Pa., May 29.—Cool, cloudy weather greeted the best college athletes who appeared at Franklin Field this afternoon for the trial heats in the inter-collegiate championships of America. The track was in splendid shape and the general opinion was that some fast performances would be witnessed. Speculation as to the winner was divided, Yale, Michigan, Cornell and Pennsylvania all having their supporters. The Red and Blues hope to carry off the honors with the men in the sprints, while Cornell is looking to the long distance vents to return her a winner.

It is practically sure that Krueger of Swarthmore, the shot putting champion of last year, will not compete. He has only been doing a round forty feet lately and feels that that distance will not be any good.

Cartmell of Pennsylvania, the champion at the two short sprints, returned to Philadelphia this morning from the seashore and says he is in fine shape. Mike Murphy is hoping for Cartmell to repeat his wins and Waltman to run a close second in the one mile race.

With Paterson, Michigan's high jumper, barred from competition, the Westerners have less chance of first place, but Trainer Fitzpatrick smiled complacently when asked about his prospects.

HERE'S MATTY BALDWIN, WHO MEETS GROVER HAYES.



The Charlestown boxer will be favorite in his bout with the Chicago slasher at the Armory A. A. to-morrow.

Both boys are said to be in fine shape and their twelve-round contest promises to be well worth seeing.

GRIFFIN HOT AFTER BOUT WITH ATTELL

BY TAD.

Charley Griffin, the New Zealand featherweight, who knocked Joe Bowker out in London a few weeks ago, blew in to see us yesterday with his manager, Harry Pollok.

"I want to box this Attel person," said Charley, cwinkling his blue eyes and rubbing his umbrella all over the desk. "I figure that he is my man and the very one I will fight next. I see that Moran boxed him a twenty-five round draw, and if that was a hard bout I think I have him numbered. Yes, I knocked Bowker out in eight rounds, and you know that Jem beat Moran, so from that I think I should be able to beat Attell, no matter what they think of me. Why, I was the short end with Bowker at 3 to 1. He's an exceptionally fast boxer, but no fighter. I'm a poncher—that is, I'd rather be mixing than boxing. All of my fights have ended in knockouts except the unfortunate one with Jem Driscoll.

"That was the only fight I ever had decided against me. I beat on a foul in the fourteenth round. Driscoll had been sticking his elbow in my eye and in retaliation I bumped him under the chin with my head. He was very rough, but even so were cautioned I cut it out, and so did he. We were having about an even fast round of the go when I had him up against the ropes, trying to finish after putting my body with both hands. You know he's a tall fellow; well, he's a bit taller than I am, and when I was about to chuck a right over I went to pull away instead of to crash one on his jaw, and as my hand came up I ran it right under the chin, and right then and there I was disqualified. 'Can he fight? Well, yes; he's a clever fellow, but has no punch. I would have beaten him that night if it hadn't been for the accidental butt on the chin.

"I'm over here now to get Attell and to get him in a long fight. No six or ten-round affair, but a long one that will be round affair, but a long one that will be decisive. Moran are communicating with him now and expect to hear from me a few days now and expect to hear from me a few days hence. Yes, I can do 122 handily. There will be no kick over the weight."

Sammy Fitzpatrick sent us this:

National Sporting Club,
London, May 5, 1908.

Dear Tad:

Johnson and I have landed in the big village without any mishap. Met as far away from a match with Jeffries as ever. Jeff will come over together last night, only a few days ago and it looks as though Johnson will get a go here with Jeff in July. Jeff's only loss at draw was with Johnson. The day we landed Burns put up £1,000 with any sporting Life as a forfeit to meet Johnson. But he had a sore toe to it—strong enough to hold up the Brooklyn Bridge—all he wanted was that £6,000 win or lose, when he knows he can never. Tuesday night the Sporting Club offered a purse of £2,500 for Johnson against Burns. Three years ago three months ago Burns was making a row when he ran against a door and broke it, swallowing about an inch of the door, an operation was deemed necessary. However, Burner appeared to a host with a fighting record second to that of Mr. C. tournament, and to the first round Spencer drove a terrific right hand blow to the stomach, and the fight was on in the first round.

Ain't it awful, Mabel?

Here's a hot one:

At Ottawa, a punch to the stomach the other night saved Harper Hughes from a serious hurt, the pain, worry and expense of a surgical operation. Three months ago Devine was making a row when he ran against a door and broke it, swallowing about an inch of the door, an operation was deemed necessary. However, Harper appeared to a host with a fighting record second to that of Mr. C. tournament, and to the first round Spencer drove a terrific right hand blow to the stomach, and the fight was on in the first round.

Ain't it awful, Mabel?

"Silent" Charlie Harvey is trying to get Willie Lewis and Harry Lewis for his card the second week in June. Harry Lewis is willing, if the namesake will do any sort of wiggle. If Willie Lewis is a welterweight, as he claims, he should do something under 150, which will suit the Philadelphia boy, and all will be well. Willie Lewis will arrive from Paris late next week.

* * *

Joe Gans came out of his last go with unsatisfactory financial returns. He was the champion, and the man whom the people had come to see, but he only got $1,800 for his efforts, while Joe Thomas received $1,000 and Jeffries, the referee, $500 for his end of the match. Unholz carried off $3,000, and Tommy Ryan the lump sum of $6,000. The Roper had to carry home his share of the receipts in big wooden boxes, while Gans had no difficulty in storing away his share. The fight drew $40,000, and as the fighters received $5,800, there was little left to pay the expenses of promotion.

* * *

Jack Johnson is meeting all comers in the music halls of London. The big colored fellow appeared at the National Sporting Club the other night in a three-round bout and was given a rousing welcome.

* * *

The Frisco sport writers are wondering who in the world they are going to get for Jeffries to box. Joe Gans, like the whip manufacturer the Baltimore wonder has a remedy, and finding more to beat him is as hard as catching whales. Tuey have signed Joe Gans and Nelson to box on the Fourth of July at Colma in a forty-five-round go. If the Dane really is as good as he claims there's liable to be another fight that will bring us gaining for a few months.

BALDWIN MAY BE FAVORITE OVER HAYES

The fighting reputation of Charlestown and New England as well is at stake to-morrow night when Matty Baldwin puts his chances against Grover Hayes, the Chicago slasher, at the Armory A. A. in a twelve-round bout.

Bonker Hill had a champion in Honey Melody, but he can't touch Matty Baldwin. It comes to consistent winning and it's a long time since Baldwin has had a decision given against him. Jack Dougherty and Murphy they all looked alike to the little fighting machine and he has passed them down the line, not losing to anybody, and he has not met anything soft.

He boxes his first match under the guidance of Johnny Moore, who, like Jack McGuigan, the head of the National A. A. that high class club of Philadelphia, has no use for anything but the top timber, and as both will be behind the two boys they will be a battle of veterans' wits as well as boxing ability.

Hayes's record is sufficient proof that Matty will have the hardest bout of his life against a boy who comes to Bean Town first time, and Matty will have to do like, who, as he nerily used to declare once will Willie Mosely, another Quaker, by holding back till the last half of the distance.

If Baldwin is a favorite, as he naturally will be, being a home boy, there will be plenty of backing for Hayes, as Quaker fans think he is substantial.

LUCIA BROKE RECORD.

One tournament record went by the board at the Boylston alleys last night when A. Lucia of Lynn rolled 323 in the individual candlepin class. The previous record was 323, by Fred Goodwin of Nodie alleys, East Boston.

CRAVATH STILL GAINS AT BAT; NOW HAS .302

Cravath, who might have warmed the bench all season had it not been for the injury to Thoney's arm, is still improving in his batting. He is now hitting for .302.

Jack Quinn's arm, Wednesday, when "Bullet Jack" gets ready to play Manager McGuire will have a difficult proposition to decide whom to lay off, but it will undoubtedly be Sullivan, as he is the weakest batter of the present trio. The averages:

AUTOS DRIVEN FAST MILES IN READVILLE PRACTICE

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Miles one second below the minute mark were driven by J. W. Seymour and Walter Christie in the Christie front drive racing machine at the Readville track yesterday afternoon. Seymour originally intended to drive the car against the mile record, but the track was in no condition for record work, while a good stiff wind blew across the oval, causing clouds of dust to arise. Seymour drove with great ability, taking the corners most gracefully and with care. Never once did he let the flyer out to its limit, being satisfied with getting familiar with the track before he attempted to cut into the record. He did several fast miles, the best of which was clocked in fifty-nine seconds. Christie himself took a turn at the track and explained to Seymour, who will drive against Basle to-morrow afternoon, the fine points of the oval. He accomplished much to the pleasure of the hundreds assembled, the best manner of making the turns, so that Seymour may know how best to handle the car when he tries for record work this afternoon and meets Basle in his match race to-morrow. Charles Basle was also out for a few tries at the track and it is safe to say that the Flying Dutchman never worked smoother than it did yesterday afternoon, although Basle, following the example of his adversary, never once let her out, being content to knock out a few miles over the minute mark. Late in the afternoon Ralph de Palma worked the Fiat racer hard for speed, they all preferring to wait until this afternoon, as the track will be in much better condition and they can train out to their heart's content, the racing committee having made arrangements with Manager Jewett of the track so that cars can train between 3:30 and 6 o'clock this afternoon. Further than that the committee has determined that the track can be used for training purposes between the hours of 9 and 12 to-morrow, so that long before the races start all the cars should be in proper condition to fight it out in several contests.

The three cars enumerated were the only ones that got on the track yesterday. They were permitted but a few minutes use thereof and that after 5 o'clock, after the close of the horse sale. There were many cars there, including the American, which will be driven in the race by Dewee. The Corbin, Wayne, Crawford and Studebaker were among the cars also at the track.

The work of getting the track will be commenced at the close of the training this afternoon, a certain quantity being held in reserve for use to-morrow morning.

CORNELL DOES NOT HOPE TO BEAT HARVARD

Little hope of beating the Harvard eight in the race down stream on the Charles River to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock is entertained by the Cornell crew, which has had many mishaps this season. The Ithacans have not rowed together long enough to obtain speed, while the Harvard oarsmen have been together all season, and have acquired a stroke as high as thirty-five, and perfect rhythm.

Both the Cornell and Harvard crews had workouts on the Charles yesterday, and it is the opinion of those who saw it on the river, that the Cornell eight is not nearly as speedy as that which beat Harvard by a half length on Lake Cayuga last season.

The Cornell crew has the following make-up: Williams, bow, 166 pounds; Bayer, 2, 164½; Clark, 3, 169; Dodd, 4, 166½; Brinton, 5, 185; Beckes, 6, 171; Rieveis, 7, 182; Cox, stroke, 167½; J. S. Clark, coxswain, 105; average weight about 170½ pounds.

The Harvard eight is: Faulkner, bow, Fish 2, Sweetzer 3, Hart 4, Wold 5, E. C. Bacon 6, Richardson 7, Sargent stroke, Bingham coxswain.

M'LEAN SURE HE CAN WIN BIG HOLIDAY RACE

Hugh MacLean, the champion motor paced rider of the world, has a roll he would like to put up that he will beat Jimmy Moran and Nat Butler in the three cornered twenty-five mile race at the Revere track on Saturday afternoon.

It is a risky chance MacLean is willing to take, as accidents and other causes may count against him, but he is game and as champion will go the limit.

It will be the first time the two-cylinder motors have been used on the local track and they are a trifle speedier than the old style as the tryouts have proved, which means express speed for the racing man to follow and the workouts have been around 1:20 for the mile, which is better time than usual to maintain for a half hour.

Nat Butler will have Charlie Turville, the veteran expert, handle the lever on his pace-making machine and he will have the best of it on the other riders.

Moran considers that he has got a handicap on the others by getting a specially made American pacing machine, as a Springfield concern has constructed an engine and frame for the Chelsea Milkman to follow; and as he is out to take the championship away from MacLean there is going to be some sport of the cycling kind.

The twosome handicap with a high grade bicycle for first prize will bring out a big field of the best amateurs. Owing to the large entry list the affair will have to be handicapped carefully. There will also be a five-mile open for amateurs and a two-mile race between operators of the two-cylinder motor machines.

HOLY CROSS IN 14-INNING TIE

WORCESTER, May 29.—If darkness had not interfered, it is likely that the Holy Cross and Seton Hall nines would still be playing, so effective was the pitching of Foley and Perry, the opposing batsmen. The score at the end of fourteen innings was 1 to 1. Seton Hall scored in the third inning on a misjudged fly and a two-bagger. Holy Cross scored in the ninth on a three-bagger and a passed ball. In the extra innings the pitchers retired in order side threatened each time.

RACE MEET IN JULY AT DOVER TRACK

DOVER, N. H., May 29.—"Long Shot" Cox, lessee of the Granite State Park, is in correspondence with William Hitchings, formerly manager of the race track here and the Saugus track near Boston, to see if he cannot make arrangements to have him manage the park here for one week and week in July, following the meeting at Smithshire Park, July 3 and 4.

In speaking of the project Cox said he believed that at that time of the season there should be plenty of horses in New England to fill a meeting, it being just before the trainers will likely be shipping to the half-mile circuits in New York State.

If the proposed July meeting here proves a success Cox will then offer another to come in September. The track here, known as the Rochester Fair, and likely one in Smithshire Park, July 3 and 4.

THAW MUST GO BACK TO MATTEAWAN HOSPITAL

STATE LUNACY CHAIRMAN DECLARES THIS BEST FOR PUBLIC SAFETY.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 29.—Harry Thaw will be returned to the Matteawan State Hospital and will not be transferred to some State insane hospital, Dr. Albert W. Ferris, chairman of the State Lunacy Commission, said to-day. The State Commission has supervision over the State hospital and the criminal insane and only through its consent can such a transfer as is proposed by Thaw's counsel be made.

Failing to secure Thaw's release in the habeas corpus proceedings, efforts are being made to have him transferred to some State hospital where the insane are not classed as criminals or subject to such strict rules. Dr. Ferris believes that Thaw's case is incurable and there is no telling when he may have an outbreak. Therefore, he believes it is safer for the public that he be confined in an institution where there is no chance of escape.

No legal steps can be taken to bring about his transfer without the consent of the State Lunacy Commission, Dr. Ferris says. He adds that the commission is behind the pair of mandamus proceedings to allow the transfer of a patient through the skilful working of insanity law. This provision, he says, has been passed on by the courts and held to be constitutional. The only way the release can be secured is through habeas corpus proceedings, and upon the burden of proof of establishing the sanity of the patient rests on the applicant. The court having decided against Thaw, there is nothing else left but to return him to the institution, Ferris contends.

To permit the transfer of Thaw to the Poughkeepsie State Hospital would be practically releasing him as Dr. Pilgrim, the superintendent of the institution, testified at the recent proceedings that Thaw was sane. After this testimony Dr. Pilgrim would be compelled to release Thaw as being sane.

EXTRAVAGANT WOMEN SCORED --BY ANNA HELD

NEW YORK, May 29.—The women of New York caused the recent panic. In every class they live far beyond their means. They are gradually driving their husbands to poverty.

About the last person who would be suspected of uttering such treason against her sex is Anna Held; but it was the fair Parisienne who spoke on the deck of La Savoie to-day just before she departed for Europe on her Summer vacation.

"Why, the wives of the rich in this city live on a plane that the ancient queens, notorious as spendthrifts, never dreamed of," she added. "And women whose husbands earn $15 a week live like the rich of a few years ago. It will all end in a great crash."

Miss Held, economist, wore a $60 Merry Widow chapeau and one of her usual modest gowns worth about $300.

SCHWAB GIVES 'GLAD HAND' TO BOILERMAKERS

DETROIT, Mich., May 29.—Adorned with a flowing white badge announcing him to be "a master boilermaker," and radiating smiles and handshakes, Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, held a reception for the boilermakers in convention here to-day.

Mr. Schwab startled his hearers by declaring all the millionaires in his list of acquaintances made their money honestly and he does not know a dishonest millionaire in the United States. He says some of the millionaires made their money by speculation, but in an honest way. Asked why men of wealth go on accumulating long after they have more than their family needs require, Schwab replied:

"It's the love of the game. As long as man's blood flows red in his veins he will be up and doing the differing, though, with those who inherit their wealth."

REPORT BRANDS COTTON CHANGE GAMBLING DEN

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The charge that the New York Cotton Exchange is gambling institution and not a legitimate exchange is practically sustained in the report submitted to President Roosevelt by Commissioner of Corporations Herbert Knox Smith and made public to-day.

Mr. Smith's report is based on exhaustive investigation begun shortly after the adoption by the House of a resolution introduced by Representatives Burleson and Livingston on February 4, 1907.

That resolution was aimed to ascertain why the contracts sold on the New York and New Orleans Exchanges brought about such violent fluctuations in the price of cotton, and also to learn whether the members of the exchanges, by combining among themselves, brought about degression in prices because under the terms of the contracts they could deliver any one of thirty grades of cotton.

Charges of Fraud.

The House resolution followed close upon the fling of charges of fraud against the New York Cotton Exchange with Postmaster General Cortelyou by Representative Livingstone and Harvey Jordan, president of the Southern Cotton Association, of Atlanta, on which a fraud order against the officials and members of the exchange was asked.

Charges were made that cotton intended for delivery on contract in New York has been systematically overgraded, also that cotton has been deliverable on contract there of such an inferior and nonmerchantable character as to have no commercial rating whatever. Complaints against the New Orleans Exchange have been of opposite character.

Against New Orleans it has been charged that the classification there has been too severe, and that cotton clearly adapted to ordinary spinning purposes has been rejected by arbitrators when tendered on future contract.

Not an Exact Science.

The report says that the classification of cotton cannot be an exact science. Furthermore, considerations apparently trifling may seriously affect the judgment of a classer. Grading depends almost entirely upon the judgment of the individual classers, "among whom there are certain men of great differences in skill and judgment." In the case of the complaints from spinners, the report says, it should be borne in mind that cotton as classed for contract delivery is mainly graded on its superficial appearance—its color, length, strength and character.

The Court says:

The investigation has shown that many extreme charges against the stock of cotton at New York can not be fully sustained. A peculiar impression that many thousands of bales of cotton in the New York market have been carried for more than three years, and that it is little more than an accumulation of rubbish, is found to be untrue. The stock of cotton at New York has on several occasions in recent years been reduced to a very small quantity.

A jury found Joseph V. Buckley guilty of selling Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks," the sealed verdict having been handed to yesterday afternoon after three hours' deliberation and was opened by Judge Brown in the Superior Criminal Court to-day. The sale of the book in this city is prohibited on the ground that it is calculated to corrupt morals. Buckley was arrested on February 5 by Inspectors McGarr and Armstrong in a Boston hotel on an indictment warrant. He lives in Cambridge.

700 HORSES WILL PARADE

The Memorial Day Work Horse parade will be enormous, for the entries number more than seven hundred, and the directors earnestly request promptness on the part of teamsters and judges.

Five large wagons, furnished free by W. D. Quimby, one of the directors, will carry lunch for the drivers and police.

The fifty veterans in the Old Horse class will be regaled, as usual, with a special preparation of oatmeal and water.

The Cadet Band will play at the reviewing stand for two hours, from 8 to 10 a. m., while the horses are being judged. The parade will start about 10 a. m., and will proceed from the intersection of Beacon street with Commonwealth avenue to Massachusetts avenue, and will be dismissed there.

1,000 GUESTS AT NORUMBEGA

More than 1,000 people from Boston and suburbs attended the twelfth annual invitation opening of Norumbega Park, Auburndale, last evening. The season at the park formally opens to-morrow. The Boston guests were taken in special cars from Park square at 5.15 and 5.30 o'clock, and everything was done by the management for their pleasure and comfort. There were five hours of good wholesome entertainment.

The visitors inspected the spacious grounds until 7 o'clock, and then sat down to a sumptuous repast in the dining room. Later they witnessed a clever vaude ville bill in the open-air theatre, which included five acts—all headliners. The performers were all enthusiastically applauded.

Norumbega Park is this year more attractive than ever. New features have been added, the grounds have been improved and a successful season is assured.

CORPORATIONS HOLD MAD CARNIVAL ON BEACON HILL

"ASK AND YE SHALL RECEIVE," RULE LAID DOWN BY LEGISLATORS.

Hear ye! Hear ye! Hear ye! Corporation Week on Beacon Hill!
If any corporation's dry, rush up and drink your fill!
These happy days of Naughty-Eight, they cannot last forever.
(The way some corporations act, it seems like now or never").
Good men (they're there) sit fast in chairs, like vessels run aground.
(These never know what's happened till the Blue Book comes around).
No more, Repubs and Dems, ah, no! there's one, where there were two.
Well may the chaplains say in prayer, "God save old Massachusetts!"

—Legislative Lyrics.

The flood of corporation measures reaches high water mark in the proffering of an act authorizing a trolley trust.

It has been a magnificent week, opening auspiciously with a law pirating the bonds of the Telephone Trust among the legal investments of Massachusetts savings banks. It ended with the savings bank law was ripped open at the eleventh hour to take in the telephone bonds. No savings bank had asked for such legislation. Some protested in vain.

In four weeks, as the prospect of legislation increased, collateral trust bonds of the Edison company showed an advance on sales of $750,000, from 94½ to above 96.

Then came the incorporation of the North End Land Boom Company, with rights in perpetuity in the Connecticut River at Northfield, free of any cost. In the same day the Connecticut River Power Company's offspring was allowed to ride over the protests of the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners.

Finally and briefly, here is what happened in a single day.

CHAPTER I.

Having got away with a unanimous Democratic-Republican report on the steam merger, the New Haven late in the day came before the Senate with a street railway merger bill.

This was put in by Senator James W. Grimes of Bristol county. Grimes is attorney, is chairman of the Committee on Street Railways, and has had two hearings on his bill; no discussion of it.

The Grimes bill, it was said, will do for the New Haven in the trolley cases practically what the Hall committee bill will do for the New Haven in the Boston & Maine matter. It will put the New Haven on the ground out from under the Dana Malone of Greenfield, Attorney General of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The Street Railway Merger bill is offered as a substitute for the report "leave to withdraw" on one of the consolidation acts asked for early in the session by President William A. Bancroft of the Boston Elevated Railway Company to buy in the West End Street Railway Company. The Elevated has been operating the surface lines under a lease.

It has been charged that this bill means:

Annuluing of provisions in the Lease Bill of 1897 providing that when the earnings of the Elevated have reached a certain figure the corporation might be made to share its excess profits with the towns and cities which make those earnings possible, the communities in Greater Boston.

That cheaper fares will never be known.

The provisions of the Lease Bill plainly bid them in mind.

That in fourteen years more the "L" may revoke its present policy of free transfers.

CHAPTER III.

In the House, without a call of the roll but by a stand-and-be-counted vote of 77 to 25, amendments were refused and the Lower Branch went along a bill repealing the anti-stock watering law of 1894.

This bill brings back to Massachusetts Finance the good old days of the "cutting a melon" was in vogue.

Whenever, since 1894, railroad and railway corporations decided upon new issues of stock, it was offered to stockholders at prices fixed by the Board of Railroad Commissioners, "based upon its market value."

If a stock was selling for $250 in the market, that is to say, it had to be issued at approximately $250. Patriotic Big State capital, it was complained, rushed off to Texas and Seattle, where cutting melons remained in vogue.

The bill moved along yesterday makes "par" the standard of value. New issues may be made at any price fixed by the stockholders, if the Railroad Commission approves the purpose of the issue. The new issue may be offered to insiders at $100. The insider can step to the telephone, call up his broker, and turn the stock over for $250. Take a pencil and figure your quick profits on an allotment of a few hundred shares.

Dividends for the new shares will continue to be earned by shipper and travelers.

Joseph Walker of Brookline, once counted among the Republican independents and near-radicals, defended this measure on the floor. The one voice raised in protest was that of Robert Luce of Somerville, Republican. No Democrat opened his head against it, all, apparently having forgotten the sermon preached in the House one short year ago by W. J. Bryan of Nebraska.

Mr. Luce is the aspirant for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor. Walker wants to succeed Luce as Speaker of the House. Three cones ago, Cole beat Walker. Walker thinks he has learned something.

CHAPTER IV.

The celerity with which this stock-watering bill sailed through the House, it is said, may be taken as forecasting the progress of the New Haven-Boston & Maine bill.

The steam railroad merger bill, if it isn't forced, will get its second reading on Monday and be up for discussion in the Senate of Tuesday. The railroad interests hope to slam it through the House late next week.

It is agreed on Beacon Hill that the railroads achieved a coup of no small proportions when they came out of the Committee on Railroads with a unanimous report. All the Democrats voted for the merger bill in the Railroad Committee, including Senator Mahoney and Representatives Dean, O'Connell and Carmody.

Senator Daniel D. Mahoney is down in Beacon Hill's "Who's Who" as a former Representative Charles A. Dean of Wakefield is engaged to be such a business, and at farming; M. Fred O'Connell is a Pittsfield lawyer; Cornelius J. Carmody is a Fitchburg politician. This is Mahoney's third year in the Senate. It is Dean's eighth session in the House. O'Connell is serving his fourth term, while Carmody is a newcomer. Mahoney, Dean and O'Connell have all had recess committee appointments.

CUNARD LINER SAXONIA HERE

The Cunard Line steamship Saxonia, forty hours overdue, arrived in port to-day from Liverpool with sixty-two saloon, 216 second cabin and 603 steerage passengers. The delay was due to damage the boat sustained in striking her pier head while docking at Liverpool, making her one day late in starting.

Among the saloon passengers were G. F. Gratwicke, wife and daughter of Leicester, England. Mr. Gratwicke is sheriff of Leicester and an editor. They will visit A. Shuman at the latter's summer home at Beverly.

Miss Hilda R. Martin, second cabin passenger, came from England to marry M. H. Duell of Lynn.

KEEPS SILENT AND WINS BET

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 29.—The open season for foot bets is on in St. Charles, a suburb of St. Louis. That's the reason for the queer antics of Edward Boston.

Boston went to work at 7 a. m. to furnish diversion for a big crowd at Fifth and Decatur streets, the busiest corner in town. On a wager of $5 with six young men he agreed to work ten hours without speaking to any one.

All he had to do was to pile six bricks on the curb on one side of the street and then carry them over to the other side and pile them there, and back again and back again all day long.

Several hundred persons watched him as he trudged back and forth with the bricks. They made all sorts of remarks and hurled taunts at him, but he kept his lips tightly shut, and won the bet.

WHIP TRAMPS OUT OF TOWN

PACKERVILLE, Ct., May 29.—Aroused by the depredations of tramps, which have been numerous of late, a band of villagers went to the tramps' headquarters, took six or seven of them and whipped them out of town with birch rods. Later they notified the remaining tramps away from the town.

INSTANT RELIEF OF ITCHING HUMOR

Limbs Below the Knees Were Raw —Feet Too Swollen to Get Shoes On—Sleep Completely Broken by Intense Itching and Burning—Well in Two Days and Says That

CUTICURA IS AMONG HIS HOUSEHOLD GODS

"God bless the man who first compounded Cuticura. Some two months ago I had a humor break out on my limbs below my knees. They came to look like raw beefsteak, all red, and no one knows how they itched and burned. They were so swollen that I had to split my drawers open to get them on and could not get my shoes on for a week or more. I used three or four different remedies and got no help, only when applying them the burning was increased and the itching was gone. Then I remembered that I had a bit of Cuticura and tried it. From the moment it touched me that itching was gone and I have not felt a bit of it since. The swelling went down and in two days I had my shoes on and was about as usual. I only wish I had used the Cuticura Remedies at the first of my troubles. They would have saved me two or three weeks of intense suffering. During that time I did not sleep an hour at a time, but was up applying such remedies as I had. Henceforth the Cuticura Remedies will be among my household gods, rest assured. George B. Farley, 20 South State St., Concord, N. H., May 14, 1907."

ELINOR GLYN SEES LIFE IN MINING CAMP

Visits Dance Halls, Mixes in Shooting Affray and 'Bucks the Tiger.'

WINE BANQUET ENDS TRIP

RENO, Nev., May 29.—"I have travelled from Budapest to Bombay, from Boston to Bakersfield, and there are few experiences I have not enjoyed and few people I have not met, but of them all Rawhide is the greatest. I would not give last night's experience for all," said Elinor Glyn, author of "Three Weeks," at Rawhide yesterday.

She is travelling through Nevada for color for another story. She arrived at the great camp in charge of Sam Newhouse, the 14th millionaire, Count Leon de Lalande of Paris and several of her friends, including a niece of Newhouse.

At 10 o'clock the round-up of the town began. In the Northern, the biggest gaming place in the camp, she wagered $200 on faro. She lost and she repeated the bet three times before she won a bet, leaving the place $1,000 to the good.

Stingaree Gulch is the tenderloin of Rawhide. Now that the wife of "Three Weeks" was in the camp spread rapidly, and thousands of persons followed in her wake as she made the rounds.

Not a thing happened to mar the night seeing trip except a drunken shooting scrape between a prospector and a gambler. The prospector took two shots at the gambler as he made his escape around the corner of a building. Mrs. Glyn witnessed this affray, but not until the excitement was over did she know why officers from her experience. Then she simply said she was tired and nervous.

A banquet was tendered her and her party in the leading hotel of the camp last night. The plates were spread on a long board table extending the length of the tent dining room. Wine flowed and the early hour. Mrs. Glyn responded to a toast on wines and drinking.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald Sued for Boys' Ball Playing by Neighbor

Neighbor Accuses Former Chief Executive of Refusing to Pay for Damaged Garden.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald has always been a lover of sport and his boys have followed in his footsteps, particularly in their interest in baseball, but their game has resulted in a suit against their father for $20, brought by one of the former mayor's neighbors, Edward Lynch of No. 102 Iowan street.

Apparently all is not pleasant in the neighborhood of No. 29 Welles avenue, Dorchester, the home of now plain Mr. Fitzgerald, and all because of the ball playing of the two young Fitzgerald boys, Tom, aged thirteen and John F. Jr., aged ten. Like other healthy young Americans these boys play ratch,' knock up "flies" and play "scrub," but not according to Mr. Lynch's liking.

Mr. Lynch, whose property adjoins the Fitzgerald estate, plants a garden every year in a plot beside his house.

In his suit against John F. Fitzgerald, Sr., he claimed that on or about May 1, 1907, the Fitzgerald boys played ball on the lot adjoining his garden. There was no fence between the two parcels at the time. He declares he went to Mr. Fitzgerald and told him he was about to plant a garden and was going to build a fence between the lots to protect it. Mr. Fitzgerald told him not to build the fence, but to go ahead and plant the garden and if his boys went in there to get the balls which they lost he would pay all damage to the amount of $20.

Mr. Lynch now declares that he did not build the fence and that his garden was damaged to the amount of $30, but Mr. Fitzgerald has refused to keep his promise to pay for the damage. The suit then followed.

The former Mayor has made answer to the declaration filed against him denying every allegation made against him.

Mr. Lynch's complaint follows:

Plaintiff's Declaration in an Action of Contract

Lynch vs. Fitzgerald.

On and about May 1, 1907, he had the use of a certain plot of land in a portion of Boston, known as Dorchester, and was about to plant a garden on the plot.

The defendant had the use of an adjoining plot of land and was used by his children playing ball and other games.

The plaintiff went to the defendant and told him he proposed to plant a garden and build a fence between the two lots for the protection of his garden. He went to the defendant and the defendant told the plaintiff not to build a fence, but plant the garden and if he allowed the children to go into his garden and get their balls which they used during the course of their games, he would pay all damage to the amount of $20.

The plaintiff planted his garden, but did not build his fence. His garden was damaged to the amount of $30, for which demand on the defendant and the defendant utterly failed to comply with this promise. Attorney for Plaintiff

F. W. CAMPBELL.

Defendant's Answer in Action of Contract

Lynch vs. Fitzgerald.

Defendant denies each and every allegation in plaintiff's declaration and says that charge made upon him was a mere promise to answer to the default, debt and misdoings of another and that said promise is not in writing and is not signed by the party or any other party legally authorized by him.

Attorney for Defendant,

J. J. CORBETT.

Ex-Mayor's Statement.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald sends out the following statement:

"It is simply a case of bolidap, and I do not propose to stand for it. The facts are as follows. I permit the boys in my neighborhood to use the land in the rear of my house fronting on Harley street for a playground. Directly behind my lot facing on Ocean street is a lot of land owned by Mr. Ferdinand, who gives the use of his land free of charge to the boys. Mr. Lynch owns a house on the adjoining lot owned by Mr. Ferdinand.

"Occasionally the boys who use my land, trespass on the land of Mr. Ferdinand, which Mr. Lynch had planted last June. Mr. Lynch called my attention to the damage done his field, pointing out three hills of potatoes that had been uprooted. I told him I was perfectly willing to pay for any damage caused by the boys playing in my lot, because I felt responsible for their being there.

"In the Fall of last year Mr. Lynch sent me a bill for $45, if I remember correctly. This amount, I was informed, pure and simple, and I told Mr. Lynch so. It was much more than the value of the crop of the whole field. I then received a letter from him saying he now needs would give, and I told him to send me a bill for the actual damage done and that I would pay the bill. This he refused to do and hence the suit."

The Ship Without a Rudder

By Tom Carlton

The merchant who fails to recognize the importance of merchandising in a modern way may be likened unto a ship without a rudder.

Sailing and steaming aimlessly about, covering considerable space, he accomplishes little or nothing in the way of actual progress, for want of proper guidance.

The merchant, large or small, should employ a definite policy in his business and have a fixed goal toward which his energies and resources should be directed. To-day merchandising is a science.

Necessary elements to success, besides proper merchandising lie in the foundation of one's business. If motives are honest—merchandise bought intelligently and priced fairly—customers treated courteously and every transaction bears the true ring of sincerity and interest, there need be no fear of failure.

How often do we see the little shopkeeper in the little shop fulfilling the part of proprietor, buyer, salesman, bookkeeper, window decorator, porter, etc., struggling bravely along under the weight of limited credit —too much work, too long hours—yet at the same time chock full of enthusiasm over his prospects and never too busy to keep his shop spick and span, bright and inviting, pausing only in his labors to glean a good point or accept a suggestion from this one or that one regarding modern means of advancing a pieayune business.

Draw the curtain upon that little shopkeeper for a space of a few short years. Again bring him within the vision of inspection. The result is truly startling—startling because of the phenomenal progress of that once-upon-a-time little merchant—startling because of the magnitude of his establishment.

There's nothing problematical in the rise of this man. He had ability, nerve, was morally sound and withal a merchandiser—the principles he selected for the basis of that little business were sound and merchandise bought judiciously, bearing the ball mark of careful, conscientious selection. His stocks, though limited at first, provided good selections and when assortments became broken, prices were reduced to clear them out entirely.

Customers in the immediate neighborhood soon learned that best assortments were in that little shop. They also found occasional bargains of exceptional worth, due to his method of keeping stocks clean and fresh.

Show windows were his first means of telling them of special purchases and these ofttimes set forth unusual opportunities in the way of style advantages. Thus customer after customer was added to the very, very few which marked the beginning and this shopkeeper was destined to become a merchant.

FIND BAY STATE WOMAN STARVING IN FLORENCE

RESCUED FROM HOVEL, RETURNS AFTER LONG EXILE TO ENJOY FORTUNE.

From a hovel in the picturesque city of Florence, Italy, where she was discovered slowly starving to death, Miss Anna B. Southwick, member of an old New England family, has been brought to a beautiful estate at Wellesley Hills, which has come into her possession through the death of her eastern cousin.

The story of this aged woman's exile and wanderings, for she is now eighty-five years old, reads like a fairy tale.

The daughter of Joseph and Thankful Southwick, Miss Southwick, was reared in luxury.

Her father operated a big tannery plant at Peabody, then Danvers, and also founded the town of Vassalboro, Me., by his family name.

Early in her career Miss Southwick had ambitions to become a painter. She studied hard and finally decided to go abroad to paint. She was an artist for art's sake.

She took up quarters in the American colony of Florence and lived the life of a section of Florence and lived the life of a section of Florence and lived the life of a section

CHANGING THE LAW TO SUIT A LAW-BREAKER

The New Merger Bill Condones the Violation of the State's Anti-Trust Law of Which the New Haven Has Just Been Found Guilty By The Supreme Court

The railroad committee has done the expected thing. It has done what railroad committees usually do at the State House. It has done what railroad committees are organized to do; what men are appointed on railroad committees to do. The public have long ceased to expect anything from a railroad committee at the State House except just what a railroad wants.

But occasionally a railroad committee does something that is flagrant even for a railroad committee to do. Yesterday it reported a bill which is as full of anarchy as any propaganda ever advanced by a conclave of anarchists, and which is more defiant of the public interests than a general law licensing crime.

It is bad in every word, letter and comma. It has not even the redemption of being frankly, bravely bad. It is a cowardly bill. It adds insult to injury, for it not only injures the welfare of the community and the dignity of our laws, but it assumes that the people of Massachusetts and the body of the Legislature are all either fools or knaves.

Driven to the wall by the overwhelming force of public opinion, by the action of the courts and of the United States Government; branded as enemies of the public interests by public sentiment, as violators of the law of the Commonwealth by the highest judicial tribunal in the Commonwealth, and of the law of the nation by the prosecuting officer of the national government, the New Haven road has now sought refuge in the fraudulent provisions of this report of the committee it owns.

It is a merger bill. It is nothing else. No Senator or Representative can favor it except AS A MERGER BILL. IT IS WORSE THAN A MERGER BILL, for it pretends to be something else. And it makes, during the next two years, the Commonwealth responsible for all that the New Haven may do.

It condones the past crimes of the New Haven and it makes Massachusetts a partner in whatever future offences that law-breaking railroad may commit.

The bill is full of defects, but it has three principal vices which overshadow the rest.

1.—It gives the New Haven a continued control of the Boston & Maine by permitting the railroad commissioners to vote the Boston & Maine stock which the courts have decided the New Haven is holding CONTRARY TO LAW.

2.—It gives the New Haven two more years in which, by THE USUAL RAILROAD METHODS, to obtain permanent control of the Boston & Maine.

3.—IT CONDONES THE DELIBERATE, WILFUL, DEFIANT LAW BREAKING OF THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD.

The seeds of anarchy lie in this proposed condonation of the offences of the New Haven.

Who can respect the law which a corporation can deliberately and wantonly violate with the approval and ratification of the law-making body?

Where are the traditions of Massachusetts? Are her laws so poor that none will do them reverence? Is it intended that only the POOR shall do them reverence? Can Senator Lodge, if this bill should pass, rise from Webster's seat in the Senate and repeat those famous words, "Massachusetts, there she stands!"

Let the sober business men, the clergymen, the lawyers, the doctors, the leaders of public thought who love and appreciate the importance of social peace pause to consider whither we are going if law-breaking is to be sanctioned because the offender is a railroad corporation attended by a swarming horde of lobbyists who are infesting the State House, the hotels and the places of amusement about the city?

Can we deport little attic anarchists while anarchy is running amuck at the State House? Can we drain a lake with a hose when we are filling it with rivers?

The scales of justice do not hang evenly in Massachusetts if a bill like this can pass.

It will not pass. No admirer of his State, no respecter of the law, no lover of justice will believe that there are inducements enough within the power of even a railroad to carry the Senators and Representatives against their interests, against their judgment and against their consciences.

THE ONE BEST BET!

In spite of the Supreme Court's decision that the New Haven road is breaking the State laws—

And in spite of action by the United States Government to compel the road to obey the nation's laws—

The New Haven road will still hold its B. & M. stock (which it broke the law in buying)—

And the common people will continue to do business at the same old stand.

Lesson VI.—The Cat.

THE Cat is a pret-ty an-i-mal with Soft Fur and Sharp Toe-nails, which it uses to Scratch when it is An-gry. It has another Bad Habit when An-gry, name-ly, Spitting. Children should learn never to Scratch or Spit, which are Habits only fit for Cats.

If the Cat sees a Mouse-hole it will watch it for Hours to Wel-come the Mouse to its Midst. This teaches us that Mice and Children should stay at Home.

When your Mother puts her Fur Coat away in Sum-mer she puts Moth-balls in it. The Moths then eat the Balls in pref-er-ence to the Fur. The Cat has no Cam-phor, but at-tracts the Moths from its Fur by mak-ing its Eyes look like Lamps. Is not this a won-der-ful pro-vis-ion of Nature?

When you stroke the Cat one way it will Purr pleas-ant-ly, but when you stroke it the other way it will make Ter-rif-ic Noises. Always stroke Cats and People the right way and you can Jolly them along.

The Cat likes to stay out at Night and try to Sing, which causes great An-noy-ance. Children should learn from this never to Sing unless they are asked.

Is not the Cat an Int-er-est-ing An-i-mal?

Lesson VII.—The Clam.

THIS Object is a Clam-shell. The Clam is not in it now, be-ing Busy in a Chow-der.

The Clam is some-times called the Rose-e-volt of the Shore, because it is so rest-ful.

You all know that "Little Children should be Seen and not Heard." Obey this like the Clam and your Homes will be Hap-pi-er.

The Clam is not so high up in So-ci-e-ty as the Oy-ster, but it is just as Hap-py, and at High Tide it Frol-ics gay-ly on the Sand. The Clam's Shell is Hard, but its Heart is soft.

So, Children, be kind to the Clam.

Lesson VIII.—The Mouse.

YOU re-mem-ber the Lesson about the Cat? The Mouse is the Cat's Straw-ber-ry Short-cake. But the Mouse is al-so a Ter-ror, and will stam-pede a Crowd of Sur-frag-ettes quick-er than 100 Cops.

The Mouse will stick its Head in a small Trap if there is a piece of Cheese in it, and then, snap! the Fool-ish Mouse is Dead. This should teach Little Chil-dren not to steal Cheese. There are Better Things.

Once upon a time a Mouse gnawed a Hole and set free a Lion, so if you ever see a Lion caught in a Rope bring a Mouse and let him out. But run away rap-id-ly be-fore the Rope is chewed.

This is all Big-o-ly teaches us of the Mouse, so now you can go home and ask your Parents to teach you to Read and Write.

Little Editorials From the People

LEARNING TO SPEAK ENGLISH

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Your editorial on the above matter enlisted my attention. Language is an important item—in fact, is the most important item—of equipment in the intellectual wardrobe.

Some add to their stock of words, and ostentatiously display their capacity and prowess in organized feat to hear the sound of their own voices. Not many of us have the courage to lay bare the sophistry that often lurks behind an avalanche of words, and yet for truth's sake it should be done.

Any one may cultivate a smooth, graceful and spirited style in writing if he is willing to bestow the right amount of thought to the work and apply himself with ardor to the masterpieces of prose and poetry that the world calls classic.

Addison's idiomatic essays are justly celebrated for their ease and balance, raillery and elegance, and for such an untiring writer he had a wonderful command of language.

Burke's addresses are an example of what impassioned thought can do when employed upon momentous themes, and in a fitting way. His use of metaphor and allegory as the twin stars of his celestial equipment is inimitable.

The "Spirit of the Age," by Hazlitt, is another distinctive work that amply repays perusal. When you read Hazlitt's essays you unconsciously imbibe his irony and feel the infection of his enthusiasm for Shakespeare and the Elizabethan dramatists.

These are a few of the writers whose works always allure us, not only as subject matter for moral contemplation, but they also serve to exercise our power of analysis and capacity to absorb.

Goldsmith, Macaulay and Coleridge are also writers whose pages are replete with wisdom, sage counsel and beautiful word-pictures.

One does not have to delve very deep to uncover the witchery and charm of De Quincey's prose, or the anxious beauties of Ruskin. The first reminds one in his long passages of the measured rhythm and elaboration of an organ recital; the second, with its stately periods of declamation, reminds one of a scientific treatise.

Each prose writer has a subtle touch peculiarly his own. The wise student by analysis discovers what that bent of mind is, and as far as practicable through exercise and the power of familiar knowledge he develops that quality in his own work.

Each of us must travel along the path of imitation, and the closer we approach to our models the more will shine our native abilities, because our ideas have then gained the potent influence of definite expression.

JOHN F. FARLEY.

GO INTO "PARTICULARS," MR. MELLEN

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

In the SUNDAY AMERICAN of May 24, the following appeared relative to the merger:

"The committee's report favors New Haven. Mr. Mellon of Worcester charges that a secret lobby of outside Democrats has been engaged by the New Haven Railroad."

Two distinguished looking pols who are not unknown on Beacon Hill, one an Irish-American doctor of note, who does an odd turn on both sides of the political fence, and a Democrat ex-Congressman, who is known in railroad circles, "have been secured by the New Haven to look after the boys.

"Reached by telephone, Mr. Mellen declined to go into particulars."

The above is the most serious public statement thus far made relative to merger legislation. I have known Mr. Mellen of Worcester for many years and admire his many sterling qualities, but feel constrained to differ from him on the importance of "particulars" on such a serious charge. If "particulars" are not essential why should such a statement be given to the press? Continued silence or refusal to give "particulars" on such a serious charge will best serve three interests, viz., the "Irish-American doctor, Democrat ex-Congressman and the New Haven Railroad."

Mr. Mellen owes it to himself, the State and the Legislature to "go into particulars." No injury can come to the Commonwealth, her industrial or commercial interests, from merger legislation this year, as there is a strong man on guard in the person of our Acting Governor Draper. Nevertheless, if the most important question before the Legislature is to be put through that body by the influence of "an Irish-American doctor and Democrat ex-Congressman in the interest of the New Haven Railroad," their constituents at least are entitled to "particulars." I have already heard three ex-Congressmen spoken of in connection with Mr. Mellen's charge.
